Wallace Seeks Presidency As Third Party Candidate

Konitsa Line Reformed by Rebels After Breaching

Greeks Manage To Rush Brigade Of Reinforcements Into Besieged City

Athens, Dec. 29 (AP).—Fresh guerilla battalions fought their way into the outskirts of Konitsa tonight and reestablished their siege, government sources said, after Greek army troops had broken open the rebel lines just long enough to rush a brigade of reinforcements into the battered city.

That brigade and the tired, outnumbered Konitsa garrison were fighting to beat off desperate guerilla efforts to seize the city for a capital of the newly proclaimed rebel Greek Communist state.

Rebels Number 29,000

A Greek general staff spokesman said the guerillas now numbered more than 29,000 men of whom some 15,000 were deployed in northwestern Greece. His figure on the total rebel strength was 11,000 higher than previous estimates.

In reforming their siege lines the rebels again blocked the Ioannina-Konista highway 5 miles north of Kalpaki. This area was the scene of bitter hand-to-hand fighting when the Greek army brigade cut its way through.

Then the critical sector shifted to the front immediately around Konitsa. Reckless rebel forces stormed Prophet Elias Hill just outside the city but were hurled back leaving 38 bodies strewn on the rocky snow covered slopes. This attack was the latest of a series of guerilla assaults which began Christmas Day.

Guerilla units seized houses in the southern edge of Konitsa. Scores reportedly were buried in the debris of these structures by the type of the garrison's artillery. Rocket-firing Spitfire planes augmented the big guns.

The rebels were suffering heavy losses and expending tremendous amounts of ammunition—an apparent indication that their chief, Gen. Markos Vafiades, has ordered his men to take the city at any cost.

Rescued Chetro Reported

(The United Press reported that at one point Greek infantry charged 2000 guerillas with bayonets.

(It said Vitfhiades, premier of the new guerilla "government of Free Greece," was reported personally leading the guerilla offensive.

(Prisoners said Markos was leading an army of seven battalions in the Konitsa fighting.)

The guerillas were described as maintaining their grip on the heights of Elaphrotopos, Vassilikon and Kalyvia which dominate the highway.

The Greek armys offensive to reopen road communications was being conducted in a triangle with an area of approximately 50 square miles and extending from Konitsa southwest to Kalpaki and then north to the Bourozani bridge.

Prisoners said the Communist leaders of the guerilla force were Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Dec. 29 (AP).—A priest, three nuns and nine other persons were sentenced to prison at forced labor today at Maribor, Slovenia, on charges of helping war criminals escape.

IT'S NICE TO BE PAID ON TIME

When your payday rolls around you expect to be paid promptly. You wouldn't like it a bit if you were told, "Sorry, come back and I'll pay you tomorrow." And, if you're a business man, you like your customers to pay you promptly.

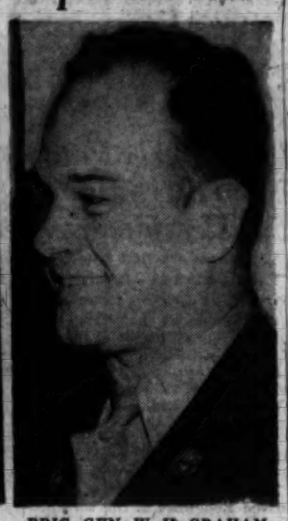
Your Post carrier boy is a business man, too. He visits you once a month to collect. He can't afford to call on each customer two, three or even more times in order to get paid.

Please bear these things in mind and have your carrier boy's money ready for him when he comes around on collection night.

99 Officials Named

Truman's Doctor, Gov. Maw Listed as Wheat Speculators

GOV. H. B. MAW



BRIG. GEN. W. H. GRAHAM

(List of Traders on Page 3)

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

President Truman's personal physician, Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, was revealed yesterday as a speculator in wheat last September.

Graham was one of 99 public officials—Federal, State and local—who, the Commodity Exchange Authority reported, were in the wheat market at the time the Government was buying heavily for export to hungry nations abroad.

Another was Utah's Democratic Governor, Herbert M. Maw, with a scattering of other locally prominent citizens in various parts of the country.

Last night Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told newsmen that Graham had told the President of his market dealings on the afternoon of December 18. Later that same day, President Truman issued a press statement, urging Congress to pass a resolution to make the full list of market speculators public, and declaring he would sign it.

Ross, in answer to a reporter's question, said Dr. Graham will remain as White House physician.

Broker Managed Investments

Both Graham and Maw were prompt in admitting their positions in the market at that time.

Graham said he had lost a portion of his savings in the stock market, and that when he moved his brokerage account to Washington last spring asked his broker to invest his remainder "the best way he knew how and to use his own judgment."

"On October 7, 1947, because of all the public discussion of grain trading, I inquired of my broker if I had any holding in wheat or any other commodity. He told me that I did have a small holding," Graham said.

"I thereupon instructed him to sell this whether at a loss or gain, as I did not wish to have any commodity transactions.

"There have not been any previous dealings in commodities in my name, or in the name of any member of my family, and there are no holdings in my name or the name of any member of my family, at the present time."

Maw in Market 20 Years

Maw, elected three years ago, told reporters at Salt Lake City that he had "participated in market trading on and off for the past 20 years." Such trading, he added, is "perfectly legitimate."

None of the trading by Government employes was in large amounts—certainly not to be compared with those disclosed to have been engaged in by Edwin W. Pauley, special assistant to Secretary of the Army Royall, early this month.

It was Pauley's demand that all names of Government employes engaged in trading that brought out yesterday's disclosure. Pauley strenuously objected to a Senate Appropriations Committee probe into his dealings, that he was being "singled out."

Pauley, a close friend of President Truman, was thus responsible for Graham's comparatively small operations being revealed yesterday.

Graham's mention of October 7 as the date when he ordered his

Control Bill Disappears at White House

Duplicate Rushed For Signing by Wednesday Deadline

The White House last night was confronted with a baffling mystery—disappearance of the original copy of the anti-inflation bill.

President Truman, though convinced that the bill was "pitifully inadequate," was prepared to sign it yesterday, however, the document had vanished. A cellar-to-roof search was instituted, but it was of no avail.

"That's why the bill has not been signed," White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters late yesterday.

Investigation Underway

He said that the anti-inflation bill was last seen on the White House desk of Clark Clifford, counsel to the President. Clifford remembered seeing it there Sunday morning. Between the time that Clifford left his office at 5:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon and yesterday morning, the bill disappeared.

Maurice C. Latta, White House executive clerk, who handles such matters, made the discovery when he went to Clifford's office yesterday to get the bill for President Truman's signature.

Secret Service men, Ross said, had started to work in an effort to solve the mystery.

Yesterday afternoon, when it became apparent that the bill might be lost for good, the White House arranged with the Capitol to prepare a duplicate bill. This was necessary because of the time factor, for unless the legislation is signed by Mr. Truman before midnight Wednesday it would expire.

Duplicate Rushed to Martin

Mr. Truman telephoned Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R., Mich.) president of the Senate, and Speaker of the House Joseph W. Martin, and told them what had happened.

Vandenberg happened to be in Washington and signed the duplicate here.

At 8 p. m. a White House courier, George Elsey, boarded an Army plane and started for North Attleboro, Mass., where Martin was to sign the document. He was to hurry back so that Mr. Truman can sign the measure this morning.

Taft Says Truman Wants 'Police Powers'

Senator Taft last night replied to President Truman's criticism of the inflation-control bill by charging that Mr. Truman was demanding but does not need "police state powers" to check inflation. Story on Page 3.

Arlington Confusion

Two Boards Manage Schools; Both Await Legality Ruling

The question of whether the old or new board is to run Arlington County Schools was still up in the air yesterday, after both boards had their day in court.

Judge J. Garland Jefferson of the Fourth Virginia Circuit, who listened to attorneys for both sides said he probably would not render a decision on legality of the boards until after January 1.

Meanwhile, both boards will run the county's schools. The judge ordered the chairman and clerk of both the present and the new boards to sign warrants for salaries and supplies.

He directed that both boards be given access to all records and documents necessary to carrying out their duties. Neither will draw pay until the judge rules on the merits of the case.

Although yesterday's order clears up the petition filed by County Treasurer John Locke Green, both sides indicated that they probably would press the case to the State Supreme Court of Appeals. Green had asked the court to decide whose signatures he should honor for the more than $100,000 in school funds paid out through his office each month.

How much the contested school board case concerns the Arlington County manager form of government also was still in doubt yesterday.

George E. Allen, attorney for the present board members, said that throwing out the act of 1947 under which the school board referendum was held would not also invalidate the County Manager Act

6 Survivors Of Alaska Crash Saved

Bush Pilots Stage Spectacular Rescue Of Bomber Crew, Hunt Two Others

Nome, Alaska, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Six half-frozen survivors of a B-29 crash in the desolate arctic wastelands were rescued tonight by daring Alaskan bush pilots, and two other crewmen who left the bomber on foot for aid were sought near the twisted wreckage.

Pilot Bill Munz landed here with four survivors and within an hour Frank Whaley, veteran bush flyer, brought two more from the icy slopes of an uncharted mountain 100 miles north of Nome where the big superfortress crashed last Tuesday.

The Air Force listed the six survivors as: First Lieut. Donald B. Duesler, San Fernando, Calif.; First Lieut. Francis J. Schaack, Oklahoma City, Okla.; First Lieut. Lyle B. Larson, Colfax, Wis.; T/Sergt. Wilber E. Decker, Plainfield, N. J.; S/Sgt. Leslie R. Warren, Waco, Ga., and Radio Operator Olan R. Samford, Whitney, Tex.

Search Continents

All were suffering from exposure after seven days in subzero weather and a howling blizzard.

Still missing were Copilot First Lieut. Vern H. Arnett, Fairbanks, and First Lieut. Frederick T. Sheetz, Keyser, W. Va. The navigator, Arnett, was one of a B-29 crew which was rescued from a Greenland wreck last spring.

Both pilots took off immediately into the Arctic twilight to hunt for the remaining two, who were believed to have left the wreckage in search for assistance.

Munz said he had been unable to locate the two paratroopers and a medical officer who landed in a blizzard Saturday night to take meedical assistance to the survivors.

One survivor had a broken leg. Another's face was frozen. Their names were not released.

Blizzard Halts Efforts

The spectacular rescues climaxed a series of unsuccessful attempts to reach the wreckage by widespread air and ground operations. Intense sub-zero cold forced an Air Force C-47 tow plane and glider to make an emergency landing 30 miles north of Nome yesterday, while Army Dog teams and snow vehicles were slowed or forced to give up because of a raging blizzard.

Seven crew members of the glider and tow plane were rescued within 30 minutes after the forced landing by a twin-engined ski plane which landed on a nearby ice-covered lake.

Survey Hits Mental Care At Gallinger

Noted Psychiatrist Scores Depressing Drabness, 'Severe' Personnel Shortage

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The Gallinger Hospital psychopathic service is a "disgrace to the city of Washington," a noted psychiatric authority declared yesterday.

The statement was made in a report by Dr. Samuel Bernard Wortis, director of the Bellevue Psychiatric Hospital and a United States Public Health Service consultant.

The 35-page report, based on a three-day survey of the District operated hospital, was received by District Health Officer Dr. George C. Ruhland over the weekend and was forwarded to Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday morning.

After a brief look, Commissioner Mason turned the document over to District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, who has been studying previous improvement plans submitted by the Health Department. Fowler's final report on what should be done with the section psychopathic service is expected to be placed before the Commissioners' meeting this morning.

Hits Personnel Shortage

Dr. Wortis, who is a professor of psychiatry and neurology at the New York University College of Medicine, wrote a blistering indictment criticizing the inadequacy, poor condition and drabness of the facilities in the service and the severe shortage of personnel.

He said bluntly, "It is a disgrace to the city of Washington that this essential health service should have been permitted to deteriorate to its present deplorable condition.

"Despite the shortage of personnel, the hospital is clean but the poverty and drabness of the place is outstanding and depressing. As you know, I've recently returned from Austria on a medical teaching mission. Only in that defeated country did I find an occasional psychopathic division as neglected as in the Gallinger psychopathic division," he declared.

Pleads for Action

The authority urged District officials not to pigeonhole his recommendations and fail to take action as was done on previous reports prepared in 1938 and 1944.

Commissioner Mason responded that the Board of Commissioners will determine whether to recommend appropriating of additional funds during District budget hearings on Capitol Hill next spring or ask for a deficiency appropriation early in 1948. He said he preferred the latter as a means of expediting action.

Dr. Ruhland welcomed the report as a step toward improving service. He stated that in other departments, Gallinger has an outstanding record. If granted

Two Court Rulings on U. S. Job Lay-Offs to Affect Veterans

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Two major decisions in Federal Courts yesterday dealt with the job and promotion rights of Government workers. They were:

1. The United States Court of Appeals here upheld a Civil Service order which gives special protection to veterans during layoffs. It approved the legality of the procedure which requires the dismissal of a nonveteran career employe before a veteran career worker even though the nonveteran has had longer service, and,

2. The Pennsylvania Federal District Court ruled in favor of Civil Service and against a group of veterans who had been demoted by the Philadelphia Navy Yard. The veterans claimed they had been illegally demoted. However, the court victory was most unsatisfactory from the Civil Service point of view since the court implied that the controversial Veterans' Preferendce Act of 1912 was still in effect.

The case here was brought by Earle W. Hilton of Charleston, C. C., who asked the court to order the Navy Yard there to restore him to his old job. A nonveteran, Hilton had been laid off after serving 12 years. He said veterans with less seniority had been retained because of the Civil Service rule which was based on the Veterans' Preference Act of 1944.

The decision held that "Congress left the solution largely to the Civil Service Commission and so long as the commission stays within reasonable limits . . . of the directive, the courts must leave it alone."

It added, however, that it did not believe that Congress "meant to foreclose the commission by unequivocally requiring that veterans, regardless of length of service, be retained over nonveterans . . . or that comparatively inexperienced veterans compose the reduced Federal force in preference to experienced nonveteran personnel."

The decision was written by Justice E. Barrett Prettyman. It upheld the District Court here which dismissed the case several months ago.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars hailed the court's decision as upholding job preference for veterans in "partial compensation for their economic sacrifices made while in uniform."

Saying the decision was "to be expected," the VFW added it should "serve as a warning to Government supervisors who have been lax or dilatory in administration of veteran job rights."

The Philadelphia decision left many vital questions unanswered. The court there threw out the

'President Doesn't Give a Damn'

Wallace Move Overjoys GOP, White House Is Indifferent

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Henry A. Wallace's hat-in-the-ring announcement last night was met with scornful indifference at the White House, but evoked from Republicans a joyous cry of "We're in in '48!"

A close associate of President Truman, asked to comment, said: "The President doesn't give a damn. Why should he?"

Democrats on Capitol Hill received Wallace's announcement with mixed emotions—relief that the cards were on the table and worry that the Iowan's presidential candidacy on a third-party ticket might cut into the Truman vote. Some of them, however, said "good riddance" and predicted that the Wallace bolt would help Mr. Truman in the long run.

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio), campaign manager for Senator Robert A. Taft, a White House aspirant, told reporters that he was "very happy," and added:

"This makes certain that we will have a Republican President in 1948."

Brown said he figured that "from 5 to 12 per cent of the Democrats" in such key States as New York, California, Illinois, Michigan and Washington would switch to Wallace, thereby wrecking Mr. Truman's chances.

Reminded that Wallace recently said that he preferred Taft to Truman, but later remarked he was joking, Representative Brown said:

HENRY A. WALLACE

"Of course he isn't for Taft. He's for Wallace, and for getting rid of Mr. Truman if he can."

Brown said he didn't agree that Wallace's bolt makes it easier for Republicans to nominate Taft "because he's been our logical man right along—all the Republicans and many conservative Democrats will vote for him."

But some of the Democrats felt that the Wallace development was a break for Taft and a blow to

Jews, Arabs Battle Anew At Tel Aviv

Fighting Flames Up After Irgun Kills 12 at Damascus Gate

Jerusalem, Dec. 29 (AP).—The "no man's land" between Tel Aviv and Jaffa broke out into a new fury of gunfire and bombing tonight, and volunteers from neighboring Arab countries were reported already crossing into turbulent Palestine.

The Arab reinforcements were reported as Jewish underground fighters killed 12 Arabs at historic Damascus Gate in Jerusalem in the largest mass slaying in Palestine since the United Nations voted for partition of the Holy Land a month ago.

Irgun Zvai Leumi, extremist Jewish underground group, said it launched the attack, in which two British constables and one Jew were also killed. Irgun made a similar attack at the massive stone gate two weeks ago, when 10 Arabs were killed.

Day's Fatalities 23

Two more Jews were killed—one a woman—in the Tel Aviv-Jaffa battle zone. The day's fatalities mounted to 23, and included a British soldier, one Jew and for Arabs—two of them boys whose newly-found mortar exploded. Arab sources said their dead at the gate included a boy and two school girls.

The toll for Palestine mounted to 429 and for the entire Middle East to 550.

Jewish sources said Arabs in tonight's Tel Aviv-Jaffa battle were reinforced by riflemen from an Arab concentration point at Nablus. The Jewish fighters fired from boats on Arab coffeehouses in Jaffa suspected as meeting places for Arabs from Nablus.

A report from Damascus told of the arrival of more volunteer

Canada Fields Called Huge Iron Source

Seen by Geologist As Successor to Lake Superior Ore

Ottawa, Dec. 29 (AP).—Iron ore fields of the Canadian-Labrador northland were described to the Geological Society of America today as potentially a "new important source of iron ore on the North American Continent," and probably a worthy successor to the Lake Superior region.

J. A. Retty, a Canadian geologist, said the virgin iron ore deposits are geologically similar to those of the Lake Superior region in type, age and natural environment.

He said the Labrador beds are found along a structural trough in the earth's crust some 350 miles long and up to 40 miles wide.

He estimated between 100 million and 200 million dollars would have to be spent to bring the property to an operating stage. A 350-mile railroad is half surveyed, and the grade is reported favorable. Harbor surveys are under way.

Geologists commented that Retty's report was "staggering." One said the fields may be "the salvation of the voracious steel industries." He stated the Lake Superior ores had been reduced in size and grade by heavy wartime demands to only a few years' actual supply.

12 Routed by Fire In Baltimore

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—Two buildings were destroyed in a $100,000 fire today which brought 23 pieces of equipment racing to the scene through the predawn stillness of south Baltimore.

Hampered by dense smoke, firefighters required 2½ hours to bring the blaze under control. No one was injured, but more than a dozen persons were routed from their home and one woman was carried down a ladder to safety.

Man Jailed in $2 Robbery Wins Habeas Corpus Appeal Action

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

The District Court of Appeals held yesterday that it is far better to interpret the historic right of habeas corpus liberally, and chance occasional error, than run the risk of depriving a person of his rights.

Overruling a decision by the District Court here, the appellate court said a writ of habeas corpus must be considered for a prisoner who claims he failed to receive a fair trial even though the writ was improperly drawn.

Habeas corpus, which literally means "produce the body," is employed to secure release of persons illegally restrained.

Petitioner in the case is Hubert H. Council, 31, formerly of 1007 D st. ne., who was jailed in June, 1946, on conviction of robbing a 73-year-old man of $2 and his car keys.

While in jail, Council drew up an appeal of his own case which he attempted to file, but it was too late to take such action. Later, he and "a friend" drafted a petition for a habeas corpus writ, which was dismissed, and Council appealed to the higher court.

Attorney John J. Wilson then was appointed by the Court of Appeals to represent Council. The court's decision yesterday does not constitute a ruling on Council's guilt or innocence, but merely calls for the District Court to consider habeas corpus action.

Council declared in this petition for habeas corpus that the prosecut-

Denounces Both Major Parties As Standing for Policy of War

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—Henry Wallace tonight announced he would be an independent candidate for President on a platform advocating "peace and prosperity."

The former Vice President and erstwhile Cabinet member, in an address prepared for broadcast over the Mutual network, struck out at both major parties with the declaration:

"There is no real fight between a Truman and a Republican. Both stand for a policy which opens the door to war in our lifetime, and makes war certain for our children."

Bolted Both Parties

Maintaining that the menace to peace was greater than ever before, the man who left the Republican ranks and now has bolted the Democrats, as well, told his audience:

"That menace can be met and overcome only by a new political alignment in America which requires the organization of a new political party. To that end I announce tonight that I shall run as an independent candidate for President of the United States in 1948."

He said "thousands of people" had asked him to "engage in this great fight." Suggestions that he enter the race had come from the Progressive Citizens of America and the new Progressive Party of Chicago. A spokesman for the new candidate told reporters that a similar request was put before Wallace this afternoon by persons from 18 States and the District of Columbia.

Resigns New Republic Post

The decision to run cast Wallace in a new role at the age of 59. He served as Secretary of Agriculture in two Roosevelt terms, put in four years as Vice President and served for a shorter period as Secretary of Commerce.

He resigned from the latter post, at President Truman's request, after he spoke out last year against a "get-tough-with-Russia" policy while Secretary of State James F. Byrnes was urging a firm hand in dealing with the U.S.S.R.

Wallace resigned as editor of the New Republic magazine, a few hours before he announced his candidacy.

The magazine announced in New York that Wallace will become a contributing editor of the publication and will write a weekly page for the publication.

Michael Straight, now publisher, will take over the editorship of the magazine, and Daniel Mebane, treasurer, will become publisher, it was announced.

31 Nazis Seized In 'Greater Reich' Plot in Austria

Vienna, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—A Nazi underground organization which had as its objective formation of a greater German reich in the event of war between the western powers and Russia has been smashed with the arrest of 31 persons in the British zone of Austria, it was disclosed tonight.

Headquarters for the plotters was in Graz, near the Yugoslav frontier.

The organizations, which operated under the guise of a commercial "trade agency," intended, informants said, to prepare the mobilization of all former Nazi forces. Upon the outbreak of hostilities, the plotters planned establishment of "a greater German reich in accordance with strict Nazi principles."

Text of Wallace 3d Party Speech

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—The following is the text of tonight's address by Henry A. Wallace:

FOR the past 15 months I have traveled up and down, and back and forth across this country. I have talked with half a million people in public meetings and with thousands in private gatherings. I have been working for, and I shall continue to work for, peace and security in America, grounded on a foundation of world peace and security.

Everywhere in the United States today, among farmers, workers, small businessmen and professional men and women, I find confusion, uncertainty and fear. The people do not ask, "Will there be another war?"—but "When will the war come?"

Everywhere I find that people are spending so much for food and rent that they cannot affor their customary services from the doctor and dentist. They do nit ask, "Will there be another depression?"—but "When will the depression start?"

Peace and abundance mean so much t ome that I have said at a dozen press conferences and in many speeches whe nasked about a third party, "If the Democratic Party continues to be a party of war and depression, I will see to it that the people have a chance to vote for peace and prosperity." To those who have come to me asking the conditions of my adherence to the present Democratic Administration, I have said, "Let the Administration repudiate universal military training and rid itself of the Wall Street-military team that is leading us toward war."

I have insisted that the Democratic administration curb the ever-growing power and profits of monopoly and take concrete steps to preserve the living standards of the American people. I have demanded that the Democratic administration cease its attacks on the civil liberties of Americans. In speeches in the North and in the South at non-segregated meetings I have stated the simple truth that segregation and discrimination of any kind or character have no place in America.

My terms to the Democratic high command have been well known.

By their actions and finally by their words, they have said: "Henry Wallace, we welcome your support, but we will not change our policies."

In answering me, the Democratic leadership also gave its answer to millions of Americans who demand the right to vote for peace and prosperity. Thus, the leadership of the Democratic party would deprive the American people of their rightful opportunity to choose between progress and reaction in 1948. So far as the Republican Party is concerned, there is no hope—as George Norris, Fiorello LaGuardia, and Wendell Willkie long ago found out.

When the old parties rot, the people have a right to be heard through a new party. They asserted that right when the Democratic Party was founded under Jefferson in the struggle against the Federalist Party of war and privilege of his day. They won it again when the Republican Party was organized in Lincoln's time. The people must again have an opportunity to speak out with their votes in 1948.

The lukewarm liberals sitting on two chairs say, "why throw away your vote?" I say a vote for a new party in 1948 will be the most valuable vote you ever have cast, or ever will cast. The bigger the peace vote in 1948, the more definitely the world will know that the United States is not behind the bipartisan reactonary war policy which is dividng the world nto two armed camps and makng inevitable the day when American soldiers will be lying in their arctic suts in the Russan snow.

THERE s no real fight between a Truman and a Republican. Both stand for a policy which opens the door to war in our lifetime and makes war certain for our children.

Let us stop saying, "I don't like it, but I am going to vote for the lesser of two evils."

Rather than accept either evil, come out boldly, stand upright like men and say so loudly all the world can hear:

"We are voting peace and security for ourselves and our children's children. We are fighting for old-fashioned Americanism at the polls in 1948. We are fighting for freedom of speech and freedom of assembly. We are fighting to end racial discrimiuation. We are fighting for lower prices. We are fighting for free labor unions, for jobs, and for homes in which we can decently live."

We have just passed through the holiday season when every radio and every church proclaimed the joyous tidings of peace. Every year at this time the hearts of the American people swell with genuine good will toward all mankind. We are a kindly, well-meaning people. But the holiday season soon passes and one of tne first items on the agenda of the new Congress is universal military training. I say the first political objective of progressives is the defeat of this bill which would deliver our 18-year-olds over to the Army and cost the Nation two billion dollars a year.

The American people read of the fantastic appropriations that are being made for military adventures in Greece, Turkey, China —and billions for armaments here at home. Slowly it dawns on us that these newspaper headlines have stepped into our every-day lives at the grocery store when we pay $1 for butter, 95 cents for eggs and 90 cents for meat.

We suddenly realize that we can't have all the people of the world getting ready for the next war without paying for it in our daily lives with less food, clothing and housing. War preparations create record profits for big business but only false prosperity for the people—their purchasing power shrinks as prices rise, their needs go unfilled, and they are burdened with new debts. Yes, corporate profits are over three times what they were in 1939 but every family is paying for our war policy at the grocery store.

Two years ago I denounced those who were talking up World War III as criminals. Of course, the bulk of our people are not criminals, but it is possible for a little handful of warmongers to stampede them. As Mark Twain long ago pointed out: ". . . the Nation will rub its sleepy eyes and try to make out why there should be a war and will say, earnestly and indignantly, 'It is unjust and dishonorable and there is no necessity for it.' The handful will shout louder . . . and now the whole Nation . . . will take up the war cry and shout itself hoarse, and mob any honest man who ventures to open his mouth and presently such mouths will cease to open. Next the statesmen will invent cheap lies, putting the blame on the nation that is attacked, and every man will be glad of those conscience-soothing falsities."

This pattern as Mark Twain saw it 50 years ago is repeating itself on a scale so vast as to threaten the destruction of humanity. The rich monopolists have always been more ready to sacrifice their sons than their money but now they have reached the point where they are willing to sacrifice both for the sake of world control.

It just doesn't make sense. The time has come for a new party to fight these war-makers. We say that peace is mandatory and that it can be had if we only want it.

Universal military training is the first decisive step on the road toward Fascism. We shall fight it to the limit and all Congressmen who vote for it.

A new party must stand for a positive peace program of abundance and security, not scarcity and war. We can prevent depression and war if we only organize for peace in the same comprehensive way we organize for war.

I personally was for the humanitarian aspects of the Marshall Plan long before it was announced. Because I saw the postwar need of helping human beings, I was accused of wanting a quart of milk for every Hottentot. I pushed for help for Greece against the opposition of the Administration eight months before the Truman Doctrine was announced. But I have fought and shall continue to fight programs which give guns to people when they want plows. I fight the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan as applied because they divide Europe into warring camps. Those whom we buy politically with our food will soon desert us. They will pay us in the base coin of temporary gratitude and then turn to hate us because our policies are destroying their freedom.

We are restoring western Europe and Germany through United States agencies rather than United Nations agencies because we want to hem Russia in. We are acting in the same way as France and England after the last war and the end result will be the same—confusion, depression and war.

IT JUST doesn't need to happen.

The cost of organizing for peace, prosperity and progress is infinitely less than organizing for war.

We who believe this will be called "Russian tools" and "Communists." Let the fear mongers not distort and becloud the issues by name calling. We are not for Russia and we are not for communism but we recognize Hitlerite methods when we see them in our own land and we denounce the men who engage in such name calling as enemies of the human race who would rather have World War III than put forth a genuine effort to bring about a peaceful settlement of differences.

One thing I want to make clear to both Russia and the United States—peace requires real understanding between our peoples. Russia has as much to gain from peace as the United States, and just as we here fight against the spreaders of hate and falsehood against Russia, the Russian leaders can make a great contribution by restraining those extremists who try to widen the gap between our two great countries.

I insist that the United States will not be fully secure until there is real peace between this country and Russia and until there is an international police force stronger than the military establishment of any nation, including Russia and the United States. I am utterly against any kind of imperialism or expansionism, whether sponsored by Britain, Russia, or the United States, and I call on Russia as well as the United States to look at all our differences objectively and free from that prejudice which the hate mongers have engendered on both sides. What the world needs is a U. N. disarmament conference to rid humanity for all time of the threat not only of atomic bombs but also of all other methods of mass destruction.

It happens that all of my mother's and three fourths of my father's ancestors came to this country before the American Revolution. I love the Americanism I was taught to respect in the public schools of Iowa half a century ago. That Americanism was betrayed after World War I by forces which found their origin in monopoly capitalism, yellow journalism, and racial bigotry. Today there is a greater menace than ever before—a menace more serious than has ever confronted the human race.

That menace can be met and overcome only by a new political alignment in America which requires the organization of a new political party.

To that end I announce tonight that I shall run as an independent candidate for President of the United States in 1948.

Thousands of people all over the United States have asked me to engage in this great fight. The people are on the march. I hope that you who are listening to me tonight will lead the forces of peace, progress and prosperity in your communities and throughout our country. Will you let me know that you have come out fighting against the powers of evil?

We have assembled a Gideon's army—small in number, powerful in conviction, ready in action. We have said with Gideon, "Let those who are fearful and trembling depart." For every fearful one who leaves there will be a thousand to take his place. A just cause is worth a haundred armies. We face the future unfettered by any principle but the general welfare. We owe no allegiance to any group which does not serve that welfare. By God's grace, the people's peace will usher in the century of the common man.

Coy Sworn In as FCC Head After 'Recess' Appointment

INTERIM APPOINTMENT—Wayne Coy, who has been director of The Washington Post radio stations WINX and WINX-FM, is shown taking the oath as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. He will serve pending Senate action on his permanent appointment by President Truman. Miss Pansy Wiltshire, assistant to the FCC personnel director, gives the oath

By The Associated Press

Wayne Coy, former Indiana newspaper publisher and one-time special assistant to President Roosevelt, was sworn in yesterday as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

The chairmanship has been vacant since November 1, when Charles R. Denny resigned to become vice president and general counsel for the National Broadcasting Co.

Coy has been associated with The Washington Post since 1944 and has been director of its radio station WINX and WINX-FM.

His appointment to the FCC was a "recess" one. After Congress meets, it will have to be submitted to the Senate.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) told reporters over the weekend that he was "not favorably impressed" with President Truman's selection of Coy for the FCC chairmanship. He said the Republican Policy Committee will discuss the appointment at a meeting early in January.

Hayes Succeeds Coy As WINX Executive

John S. Hayes yesterday became a director, secretary and executive vice president of WINX Broadcasting Co., succeeding Wayne Coy.

Hayes, 37, has been station manager of the New York Times radio stations, WQXR and WQXQ. He served for several years as coordinator of sales and programming at WIP in Philadelphia and from 1936 to 1941, when he entered the Army, he was assistant program director of WOR in New York. He was commanding officer of the American Forces Network in the European Theater during the last war and for his work in that capacity, as well as for subsequent duty as associate director of Troop Broadcasting Service on General Eisenhower's staff, he was awarded the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star, the French Croix de Guerre and the Order of the British Empire. At the war's end he was a lieutenant colonel.

He is the author of a radio textbook, "Both Sides of the Microphone."

Wallace Move Overjoys GOP

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, generally regarded as the No. 1 contender for the GOP nomination.

Senator Claude Pepper, left wing Democrat of Florida, who tried in vain to prevent the ditching of Wallace as Vice Presidential nominee in '44, said last night that he would remain with the party of Jefferson and Jackson because "it is best for liberals to work within the Democratic Party."

Pepper Praises Wallace

In a telephone interview with the United Press from Fort Meade, Fla., Pepper said:

"I shall continue to support the Democratic ticket and the Democratic nominee in every way possible. Mr. Wallace is a sincere and patriotic American and I do not in any way doubt or impugn his high motives. But I believe I can do more good inside the Democratic Party than any other way."

Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) said he was "giving consideration" to the possibility of running for Vice President on an independent ticket headed by Wallace.

"I have to think it over," he said, and went on to agree with Wallace that American foreign policy was just "plain stupid."

Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said at Albuquerque, N. Mex., that Wallace's announcement "will clear the atmosphere in the coming campaign."

Move Expected

"It is more orless what we expected," McGrath said during a train stop on his way to Los Angeles for a series of party conferences.

McGrath said that Wallace had only one motive, "to defeat the bipartisan foreign policy of the United States, which can have only one effect—namely a victory for the Communist foreign policy of Russia." He added:

"We may not get some of the Communist votes which might have been forced on us if they did not get a chance to get under a roof of their own."

Capt. Victor Hunt Harding, executive secretary of the House Democratic campaign organization, said: "The more I think about it, it's the best thing that could happen for us."

Harding said the Republicans may discover that the Wallace candidacy "cuts two ways, politically." He continued:

"There are a lot of extreme isolationists—call them pacifists, if you will—who were set to vote the Republican ticket. Clearly many of these will now vote for Wallace.

Sees Ticket Unaffected

"As for the loss of the Communist and fellow traveler votes, that will help us with conservative Democrats. In the long run we should pick up at least as many on the right as we lost on tthe extreme left.

"If we couldn't elect Mr. Truman with this development, we couldn't elect him anyway."

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) said Wallace's bolt means in his book "that Dewey is already eliminated." With Wallace splitting the Democratic vote, he said, the GOP will be confident that "any republican can carry New York—Taft as easily as Dewey."

Johnson thought that the Wallace third party move would lend a new and weightier emphasis to the vice presidential nominee of both of the two great parties. He said:

"In the East, Massachusetts will have many of the pivotal State qualities New York would have had if Wallace had not bolted. I expect to see the Republicans put somebody like Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts on the ticket with Taft.

"And I wouldn't be surprised to see the Democrats nominate Senator Joseph O'Mahoney of Wyoming to run with President Truman." (O'Mahoney is a native of Massachusetts.)

Third Party Vote Often Has Swung U. S. Presidency

By The Associated Press

Third parties in American politics have, on occasion, swung presidential elections but they have been notably unsuccessful in electing their own candidates.

In 1844 James G. Birney, an anti-slavery Kentuckian ran as a Liberty Party candidate and polled enough votes so that Henry Clay, Whig, lost New York State to James K. Polk, Democrat. This gave Polk the Presidency.

In 1884 an organization of displeased Republicans, the so-called Mugwumps, garnered enough votes for John P. St. John to take New York away from James G. Blaine and swing it to Democrat Grover Cleveland. That was enough to put Cleveland into the White House.

In 1912, the split in the Republican Party, with the bolt of Theodore Roosevelt, gave Democrat Woodrow Wilson the Presidency although he did not poll as many votes as did Roosevelt and Republican William H. Taft combined.

In 1924, Robert M. LaFollette and Senator Burton K. Wheeler revived the Progressive Party, as Theodore Roosevelt's Bull Moosers were formally named, and polled nearly five million popular votes but only 13 electoral votes—Wisconsin's.

Letter Probed After Blasts Rock Steel Plant Area

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 28 (U.P.).—District Attorney General J. Carlton Loser said today he is investigating a letter written by the striking Steelworkers' Union (CIO) to "determine if it was a part of a conspiracy to shut down by violence" the plant of the Nashville Corporation here.

Loser's statement came after three explosions rocked the vicinity of the plant early today and after a man was arrested inside the plant with 25 sticks of dynamite and dynamite caps.

The letter, Loser said, was sent to all union members last Friday, saying that the plant "must be closed down Monday" in the eighth week of the strike.

Graham, Maw Held Losers in Trading

Sales During Bear Movement on Exchange Suggest Neither Had 'Inside' Knowledge

Both Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, President Truman's personal physician, and Gov. H. B. Maw (D., Utah) lost heavily in their grain market operations in September, the report made public yesterday indicates.

An analysis of their trading on the four days covered by the report indicates that neither had any "inside" information of Government grain buying policies or impending announcements, or, if he did, didn't profit by it.

In fact the report of the 99 local, State and Federal Government employes who were playing in wheat in September, shows that the vast majority were on the wrong side of the market on the days listed.

On all four days the market went down, influenced that direction by Government announcements—in fact, the downward movement was almost entirely due to Government statements.

3 Bearish Announcements

Both Graham and Maw were in a market position to lose in a bear—or downgrade market and to profit only in a bull market.

The Government actions influencing the market on the four days September 17 to 20, inclusive, were:

September 17: announcement that Government allocations for grain for export in November were cut to 29,514,000 bushels, as compared with 45,685,000 bushels allocated in October, the month before.

September 18: the first Government request that grain exchanges raise their margin requirements from around 25 cents a bushel to 33 1/3 per cent of the amount involved—in the case of wheat to about 90 cents a bushel.

September 19: announcement by the Department of Agriculture that half the corn crop was safe from frost—a report that sent corn down which in turn dragged other grains with it.

On September 17, the report shows Graham was "long" 30,000 bushels of wheat and short 20,000. This might indicate that he was partly covering a "long" position in one future, by selling "short" in another.

Or it might indicate that, when the report was made, the broker had not made up the sales statement, and that the "short" transaction took place on that date.

If so, it would mean a loss up to 10 cents a bushel on 20,000 bushels that day—as the market on September 17 dropped the full limit of 10 cents during the day's trading, making up part of the loss in a small rally at the close.

The report further shows that the remainder of Graham's holdings were sold on September 19, which would indicate he took a further loss of up to 20 cents a bushel on the last 10,000 bushels he held.

More Sold after 18-Cent Drop

If that analysis is right, Graham lost up to $2000 on each transaction—a loss brought about by Government action.

Maw's account is simple to analyze. He was long 5000 bushels on September 17 and sold, or was sold out, the next day—in which time the market had dropped as much as 18 cents at one time.

On each of the four days shown in the report the market slumped the full limit of 10 cents a bushel permitted in one day's trading. In three days it made up part of the loss before the close. On September 19 it closed at the bottom.

Following is a table of the closing prices in the four wheat futures dealt in on the days mentioned. The over-all loss in the four days of trading ranged from 19½ cents in September deliveries, 20½ cents in December, 23 cents in May and 25½ cents in July:

Date	Sept.	Dec.	May	July
Sept. 17	2.77	2.77½	2.74½	2.53
Sept. 18	2.71	2.70½	2.66⅞	2.44½
Sept. 19	2.61	2.60⅝	2.58⅝	2.34⅝
Sept. 20	2.57½	2.57¼	2.51⅝	2.27½

Baltimore Grocer Foils Holdup Men

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—Two men held up and beat a 62-year-old grocer today but fled without taking anything when he shouted for help.

The grocer, Abraham Euzent, was treated in Maryland General Hospital for cuts and bruises. He said the pistol one of the men produced appeared to be a toy.

Conception of Universe Size May Change, Astronomers Tol

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 29 (AP).—Observations through the 100-inch telescope at California's Mount Wilson Observatory may cause drastic revisions in current conceptions of the universe, some members of the American Astronomical Society indicated today.

Dr. Joel Stebbins of Washburn Observatory, Madison, Wis., told the organization's semi-annual meeting the Mount Wilson studies disclosed a startling redness in galaxies on the outer fringes of the universe.

Dr. Stebbins' report which drew the comment the problems of the expanding universe and the size and material content of the universe as a whole had become more complex rather than simplified.

They said the required quantity of "intergalactic dust and gas" which would account for the reddening would increase the total calulated amount of matter in the universe as much as a thousand times.

Increases in total calculated matter might, in turn, require the universe itself to be considered much smaller than has been generally supposed.

It was apparent, they said, that estimates of distances to the most distant galaxies may need drastic revision in view of the fact that reddening has the effect of making the galaxies appear fainter on photographic plates than they otherwise would be.

They declared, since the theory of the expanding universe is based on the estimates of the distance, which are made apparent from the magnitudes of the galaxies, it was evident from Dr. Stebbins' report the faint nebulae and the inferences from them concerning the expanding universe and the size of the observable universe must be reexamined before further conclusions can be made.

Listing of Speculators Annoys 'Little Fellows'

The Commodity Exchange Authority reported last night it is getting a flood of complaints, particularly from "little fellows" mentioned in its list of speculators.

"Some were in just to pick up a little Christmas money," a CEA spokesman said, "without telling their wives.

"Others, in the market in a small way, are church leaders in their communities and never before thought that speculating in grain was immoral—as it has been made to seem now."

Taft Charges Truman Seeks 'Police State' Price Powers

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), Republican Senate policy boss, blasted back at the President last night with the charge that Mr. Truman was demanding, but did not need, "police state powers" to check inflation.

The day before, the President had branded the GOP anti-inflation bill as "pitifully inadequate." Though it contained only "feeble steps" for control, and "will not do the job," Mr. Truman said he would sign the measure.

Taft's retort was made in a speech last night in Kansas City, a stop on the Republican presidential aspirant's two-day swing through Mr. Truman's home State.

The Government "can stop the increase in prices if it really wants to stop it," he asserted. Earlier in the day, at a press conference, Taft said, "I've tried to point out that the President has had the power all along to check inflation."

Wanted OPA, Taft Says

Mr. Truman's real objection to the bill, Taft said, "is that we did not reinstate OPA. Our own experience with OPA and that of other nations which have tried price control shows that such methods will not work in times of peace."

Support for the President's condemnation of the bill was forthcoming yesterday from a different Republican quarter. Party rebel Senator Morse (Oreg.) said the GOP deserved the rebuke handed it by Mr. Truman because Republican leaders were responsible for the "political gesture anti-inflation bill."

Morse said in a statement it is fortunate for the Republican Party and the country that the great majority of Republican voters "do not share the reactionary economic views of those responsible for the bill."

He said most Republicans believe it is the primary responsibility of Congress to propose and enact legislation to protect the people from the "predatory profiteers who are taking selfish advantage of the inflation crisis."

Still Chance for GOP

It is not too late, Morse said, for the Republican Party "to recover the anti-inflation bill which it so clumsily fumbled in the special session of Congress."

"However, if Republican leaders in Congress want to win the political confidence of a great majority of both Republican and independent voters, they must stop trying to sell the profiteering program of the National Association of Manufacturers as good Republican doctrine."

But Taft insisted it was President Truman who was "playing all the politics he can with high prices."

The inflation, he said, was due to the policies of the Government for the last 15 years and had been brought about "by the lavish use of money and the tremendous Government deficits."

The Republican approach, Taft said in his speech, "is to solve this inflation crisis by getting at the causes, by pursuing sound policies in the ordinary conduct of Government, by spending less and taxing less and preventing inflation. The Democrats want more power to impose arbitrary controls which won't work."

He declared that when Congress returns "we face a demand from the President for the greatest possible peacetime control over economic freedom which this coutnry has ever faced," but added that Republicans believe "it is not power that the Government lacks, but the ability to furnish leadership."

"The New Deal remedy, backed by the Political Action Committee and therefore by the President, is to solve every problem by creating a Federal bureau, and give it more power and more money." He continued, "If anything goes wrong, pass a new law! This has always been the policy of the New Dealer."

Totalitarian Question

The great issue in the election next November, he said, "is whether the American people desire to set up a "totalitarian government, a state which will direct every detail in the lives of its citizens."

In Washington, meantime, Administration leaders made ready plans to be put into effect when the bill is signed.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson was prepared to issue an order limiting grain used by distillers to 2,450,000 bushels until February 1, or considerably less than half the normal rate.

W. Averell Harriman Secretary of Commerce, was reported ready to set up industry advisory boards to help carry out voluntary agreements for distributing scarce commodities.

It was indicated that these boards, similar to those operating in the war production program, would hold hearings before any allocation measures are adopted.

Harriman already has called top steel executives on parcelling out scarce steel supplies.

Philadelphia Limits Fuel Oil Purchases

Philadelphia, Dec. 29 (AP).—Mayor Bernard Samuel announced today that no householder in the Philadelphia area will be permitted to buy more than 100 gallons of fuel oil at a time—and then only if his tank is less than one-quarter full.

"We find the situation serious, but only temporary in nature," Samuel said.

Truman's Doctor, Gov. Maw on Trader List

broker to dispose of his holdings in grain, corresponded with President Truman's most vicious jab at what Mr. Truman termed "gambling in grain."

On October 5, two days before, Mr. Truman, in announcing the food-conservation drive headed by Charles Luckman, denounced grain speculation as "just plain gambling."

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) last night issued this comment on General Graham's grain operations:

"Now that we have learned that the White House physician has been devoting a great deal of his attention to gambling 'in grain and human misery,' there is every cause for grave concern for the President's health—both physical and political."

Pauley was again listed as a grain speculator in yesterday's list. It showed him as holding 25,000 bushels of wheat on September 18. This is believed to be part of 50,000 bushels he told the Senate Committee, that were bought in his name as a year-end bonus for "five or six—maybe more—trusted employes."

The largest operator on yesterday's list was a Chicago policeman, Capt. Daniel P. Gilbert. He was "long" 40,000 bushels on September 17, and "short" 20,000 bushels. His trading operations indicated he took considerable punishment in the next four days.

The next largest was a Naval Reserve ensign at Palm Beach, Fla., John E. Turner. Turner's operations were large during all the four days in the report, indicating he was following price changes promptly.

One interesting name was that of Harold B. McDonald, a clerk in the Internal Revenue office. McDonald was identified as the son of J. E. McDonald, Texas Commissioner of Agriculture. The elder McDonald has been a frequent visitor on Capitol Hill where he has consistently opposed the Administration's farm policies.

One high-ranking State official on the lists was Zack D. Cravey, comptroller general of Georgia. At Atlanta Cravey said: "I am a farmer and for 27 years have traded in turpentine, mules, cattle, chickens, eggs, corn, wheat, cotton, timber and other legal commodities.

"It has all been entirely legal, without exception."

Three Agriculture Department employes were listed—none of them on a policy level where they might know Government plans. They were:

James Lee Zimmerman of Lexington, N. C., a soil surveyor.

Donald J. Smith, farm labor supervisor of St. Paul Minn.

Ralph J. Baker, Lincoln, Nebr.

D. C. Residents Listed

Listed yesterday were the following from the Washington area:

W. Edmund Baxter, War Assets Administration, Silver Spring, Md.

John and Mrs. Rosa Brown, clerk, Veterans' Administration.

William D. and Mrs. M. Chandler, Navy Department, Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va.

Williston F. Dye, Navy Department.

Robert L. Gray, Navy Department.

Herbert M. Hall, clerk, Veterans' Administration.

D. C. Halverstad, listed as "Government employe."

Mrs. Charles S. Johnson, Government interviewer, 3200 16th st. nw.

T. Wade Harrison, United States attorney, 3463 S. Stafford st., Arlington, Va.

Harold B. McDonald, clerk, Internal Revenue Department.

Gilbert L. Parks, field representative, Office of Price Administration, 1008 22d st. nw.

B. R. Powell, jr., State Department, Vienna, Va.

Oliver L. Billingsley, Commander U. S. Navy, administrative officer War Agency Liquidation Unit, Interior Department.

Martin Cafaro, research associate, United States Government, 3417 14th st. nw.

K. R. and Mrs. M. G. Martin, Colonel, U. S. Army, Norfolk, Va.

John Kerr Rose, geographer, 1308 16th st. nw.

A Labor Department conciliator, Earl J. Ruddy, of Los Angeles, Calif., was listed.

Another prominent State official on the list is Walter F. Roberts, Railway Commissioner of Nebraska.

General Graham, as White House physician since September, 1945, checks the President's physical condition daily and accompanies Mr. Truman whenever he leaves Washington.

He also ministers to the President's family and to the White House staff. He also is physician to Agriculture Secretary Anderson. Recently, he took over the added job of raising Feller, Mr. Truman's month-old cocker spaniel.

Graham, who is 37, met the President during the Big Three conference at Potsdam, Germany, when the Chief Executive first conferred with Premier Josef Stalin of Russia and Winston Churchill, then Prime Minister of Britain.

A veteran of the Normandy, Belgium, Holland and German campaigns, Graham was then serving as chief of surgeons at the 97th Evacuation Hospital, Stuttgart.

On his return to Washinton, Mr. Truman appointed him to his present post. They since have become close personal friends, a bond which was strengthened when Graham treated the President's mother during her fatal illness earlier this year.

Born on October 9, 1910, in Highland, Kans., Graham has lived in Kansas City, Mo., since 1919. His father is Dr. James W. Graham, of Kansas City, whom Mr. Truman has known for several years.

Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry, (R., Nebr.), said when advised of the latest list that the time has come for the Administration to reveal the "whole picture without further quibbling."

He hoped the public would "differentiate" between millers, cattlebreeders and other legitimate traders and "insiders who used the market for ulterior and selfish motives."

Senator Arthur V. Watkins, (R., Utah), declined comment when advised that Maw, a Democrat, was on the list.

Two Federal employes listed—W. Edmund Baxter, chief of the War Assets Administration's public interest branch, and B. R. Powell, jr., a former State Department legal representative—said they had "no inside information" that would help them in the grain market.

Baxter, who was listed as holding 1000 bushels long, said Anderson's list was incomplete because it failed to show that he sold short 1000 bushels of corn at the same time.

"I lost money on the deal," he said.

Denouncing publication of the list as "an invasion of the right of privacy," he said he entered the commodity market "on a very insignificant scale" at a time when there was "no question of propriety." He did so, he said, in an effort to "make some money and keep the wolf away from the door."

He said he had invested in real estate and Government bonds for the same purpose and held more money in bonds than he ever had invested in the market.

Powell, who was listed as 5000 bushels short on September 17 and made a 5000 bushel purchase on September 20, told the United Press his trading was done by his father, a retired Birmingham, Ala., businessman.

Two Boards Manage Schools

of 1930, under which Arlington operates.

State Senator William D. Medley, attorney for the new board argued that if the new school board is invalid, so is the Arlington County Board and the Arlington County trial justice. He pointed ou tthat method of election of these officers differs from that in all other counties.

Frank L. Ball, sr., another attorney for the new board, said that if the Act of 1947 is a local act, so was the one in 1940, increasing membership of the board from three to five persons.

"I cite this just to show the ridiculous situation in which they (the present school board) have placed themselves," he said.

The present school board has attacked constitutionality of the act of 1947 on two grounds:

1. They contend that it was a local law enacted by the General Assembly concerning "conducting of elections."

2. They say that it was an amendment to a general law to give the effect of enacting a local law.

"It is not what a law includes, but what it excludes that makes it local," Allen asserted. He called the classification of counties eligible under the act of 1947 "illogical, unreasonable, arbitrary and almost fantastic."

The new school board, which has been duly qualified, will meet Friday to elect a chairman.

Flaxer Hits Loyalty Test Directives

Abram Flaxer, president of the CIO United Public Workers, last night charged that the rules issued Saturday by the Loyalty Review Board are "mere window dressing" for police state procedures.

"It is obvious," he said in a statement, "that a facade of sham hearings and procedures have been erected to hide the real situation—that a police agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation—now has sole and exclusive authority to render judgment on the loyalty of Government employes.

"The public had been led to believe the appointment of this board would result in the establishment of procedures guaranteeing government employes the basic civil rights all Americans have enjoyed under our constitution . . . The board has done nothing to allay the just suspicions which had previously been expressed . . .

"Of what use are three hearings or appeals if the accused is denied the right to confront the witnesses against him and deprived of the right of cross-examining such witnesses? . . .

"The hearings and appeals boards are in the same position as a jury in a murder trial that has been instructed to find the accused guilty on the basis of nothing more substantial than a secret report from the chief of police saying that he has information as to the guilt of the accused from an anonymous witness whose identity cannot be disclosed. . . ."

Autoist Gets $50 or Jail in Hit-Run Case

Abb H. Kempson, 53, of 2802 Devonshire pl. nw., was fined $50 or 10 days in jail yesterday on a charge of leaving after colliding.

Kempson was arrested at his home after two police lookouts had been broadcast for his car. One lookout connected him with a hit-and-run accident in Montgomery County; another in an accident at Connecticut ave. and Military rd. nw.

He was not held on the Montgomery County charge because the plaintiff was in the city for the holidays and did not want to press the charge.

In the District crash, Roger Miller, 9353 Omaha Beach dr., Silver Spring, Md., told police Kempson's car sideswiped his and drove away. Miller said he gave chase, but stopped and called police when he found one fender of his car was rubbing a tire.

U. S. Reports Soviet Flights Over Korea

By The Associated Press

Russian aircraft were reported yesterday to have flown over American occupied Japan and Korea numerous times without prior authorization during the past months.

Diplomatic officials disclosed this to a reporter yesterday in commenting on a Russian protest to the State Department against alleged American flights over the Soviet-held Kurile Islands off Japan.

These Government officials described the Russian note as one of many received monthly by the State Department about such matters. These notes are considered so insignificant, they said, they are referred to American commanders on the spot for possible action.

The Russian planes which these officials said flew illegally over American territory in the Far East included transport planes which veered from the course assigned them in their regular flights from Siberia to Tokyo. These flights are allowed by General MacArthur's headquarters because the Russians say they need them to service and supply their staff in the Japanese capital.

Bulgarian Envoy Calls On Truman

Dr. Nevorah

President Truman yesterday told the Minister of Communist-dominated Bulgaria the American people will continue their friendly interest in the "arduous struggle" of the Bulgarian people to build an independent and democratic country.

Mr. Truman made the statement at the White House in receiving Dr. Nissim Judasy Mevorah as the first postwar envoy of the Bulgarian government.

Dr. Mevorah said that he believed the renewal of diplomatic relations between the two countris will mean that "many prejudices will be disspelled and many harmful legends about the postwar Bulgarian government will be "destroyed."

The President pointed to the many contributions by individual Americans toward Bulgarian education and social welfare, then added:

"There is no question in my mind concerning the continuance of this friendly interest of the American people and I sincerely believe the reestablishment of diplomatic relations between our two countries and the recent entry into force of the peace treaty offer a means and a basis for the maintenance and strengthening of the many ties between Bulgaria and the United States."

Dr. Mevorah, the first acknowledged Communist to represent any of the Balkan countries in the Soviet sphere, said what characterizes the new Bulgarian government is "the will to open a new era of stable peace and good neighborly relations . . .

The Bulgarian envoy said that by sending a minister to Sofia the United States will find that the Bulgarians are "hard-working and honest people who were badly governed and directed in the past."

Mevorah told reporters at the White House that the President asked a great many general questions about Bulgaria and that he told him his country "has made many efforts to improve its social and cultural progress."

Asked by a reporter if he thought the Greek situation might lead to war; he replied.

"Oh, no, no, no."

Then he added, "we hope nobody starts a war lightly. We had a difficult time in the last war."

Errant Penguin Is Found Slain —In Wrong Nest

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Bronx Zoo officials today were investigating the murder of a black-footed penguin, beaten and pecked to death by beak and flipper wings.

Each of the five families in the zoo's penguin enclosure have their own nesting box, and the deceased apparently "became confused and returned to the wrong box," suggested William Bridges, zoo information director.

"And you know," Bridges added, "penguins are very jealous."

Prsoner Wins Writ Appeal

ing attorney in his case was permitted to tell the District Court jury that Council had a previous prison record.

This statement, said Council, escaped the attention of his own attorney because the attorney was hard of hearing.

Council declared that he did not commit the crime of which he was convicted; that he was denied assistance of counsel at a preliminary hearing, and that he was not identified by the complainant, who was Joseph P. Hunter, 73, of 20 8th st. se.

In addition, the defendant said, he relied on his counsel's assurance that an appeal would be filed in the case, and did not learn that this had not been done until the time permitted for an appeal had lapsed.

In affidavits filed with his petition, Council stated that his attorney in District Court was Robert I. Miller. Miller said last night that he could not recall handling the case.

In his opinion yesterday, Justice Bennett Champ Clark, who heard the petition in the Court of Appeals with Justices Henry W. Edgerton and Wilbur K. Miller, declared:

"It is well established that petition for the writ (of habeas corpus) may not be used as a substitute for an appeal or a writ of error . . . However, the limitations . . . should be flexible and readily available to prevent manifest injustice . . .

". . . when the question is raised on or near the borderline of legal propriety we feel it must be resolved in favor of the petitioner . . . (even) if such an attitude has as its consequences an occasional abuse of the facilities of the court . . ."

While reversing the lower court's decision, the appellate court also noted the danger of "warping the habeas corpus process into a second-chance appeal."

Taft-Hartley Act Declared Real Issue in Printers' Strike

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—A publishers' representative told congressional investigators today that the five-week-old AFL International Typographical Union strike against Chicago's six daily newspapers "appears to be a battle between the ITU and the Congress itself."

Testifying before a House subcommittee headed by Representative Owens (R., Ill.), Robert C. Bassett of Chicago, general labor counsel for the Hearst newspapers, and a representative for the Chicago Newspaper Publishers Association, said:

"You have been told the issue is wages. A study of the first two days of testimony taken by this committee makes one realize . . . that the real issue is not wages. The real issue is the Taft-Hartley law. It is apparently an effort to amend or destroy the Act . . .

"The issue of the Chicago strike is whether the publishers here shall have a mutual normal contract . . . or shall we connive with the union to defeat the provisions of the Taft-Hartley law."

Bassett said the publishers have been told repeatedly over the conference table by the union that the ITU, despite specific bans he said were contained in the Taft-Hartley law, "intends to maintain three conditions which have been in effect for years."

Bassett said these conditions are the closed shop, right of the union to determine its own jurisdiction and the right of the union to refuse to handle struck work.

Woodruff Randolph, international president of the union, testified Friday, "There is no union that has felt the impact of the Taft-Hartley law as we have. It appears to have been tailored for us."

Not Aimed at ITU

In reply, Bassett said, "we feel no reason for the ITU to take the position that the anti-closed shop provision of the Taft-Hartley Act will destroy their union." He added the ITU "is not the type of union at which the act is aimed."

The strike of 1500 printers, which started November 24, resulted from a deadlock in negotiations since the ITU's contract with the publishers association expired October 21.

The union contended the publishers' refusal to put into effect immediate wage increases voted by the union, pending negotiation of other issues, caused the walkout.

The publishers said the issue was not wages but the union's refusal to negotiate their wage and other demands in a "lawful contract of reasonable duration."

Md. Counties To Hike Water Works Taxes

Front-foot benefit charges for all new subdivisions in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties in 1948 will be increased from 12 to 18 cents per foot, the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission announced yesterday.

The increase which applies to subdivision water and sewer construction resulted from higher material and labor costs, the commission said.

Under the law, the charges must pay for water and sewer construction in subdivisions.

The commission said property now assessed will not be affected by the increase, but will become effective January 1.

An Overcrowded Psychopathic Ward

The Washington Post

AT GALLINGER—There is barely enough room between beds for a person to walk through in the East Wing of the Gallinger Hospital psychopathic building, as this picture shows. To quote from the survey report made public yesterday: "On Ward East I the beds are so closely packed together as to violate the most elementary health rules. Here, again, the building is drab, the wards poorly arranged, the nursing station . . . has no outside windows and the nurses have no direct view of the patients"

Gallinger Psychopathic Unit Called 'Disgrace' to District

"proper housing and additional staff the psychopathic division could be brought up to the same outstanding standard," he said.

Dr. Alvin Sweeney, Gallinger superintendent, said that "in substance" he, too, agreed with the report and hoped that funds for improvements would be forthcoming.

The specific recommendations made by Doctor Wortis follow:

1. A new psychopathic division of about 200 beds should be erected.
2. A psychiatric outpatient department for care of pyschoneurotics, children and alcoholics is urgently needed.
3. A special psychiatric children's ward, in-patient service, is urgently needed.

More Physicians Urged

4. The staff of physicians should be increased from five to 15, plus interns and residents.
5. Three full-time psychologists should be hired.
6. Four full-time psychiatric social workers should be employed.
7. Nursing and attendant staff should be increased to 113.
8. Messengers, additional stenographers and a reception clerk should be added.
9. Three more workers in recreational therapy are needed.
10. Cooperation between the medical and nursing staffs should be improved.
11. A library of books and daily newspapers should be provided for patients.
12. Tubs for prolonged baths should be repaired and used in the disturbed patients' wards.
13. Mechanical restraints should be applied only on order of a physician.
14. Occupational therapy should be expanded to include those who cannot leave their wards.
15. Ambulant patients should have opportunity for daily exercise and outdoor games.
16. A drinking fountain should be provided on each ward.
17. Pantry, kitchen and dining room services should be modernized. "At present, they are a sad sight."
18. Wards need painting and "home-like decorating."
19. Hydrotherapy department needs lighting, repainting and added staff.
20. The biulding elevators should be overhauled.
21. Corridors, wards and examination roms should be soundproof.
22. Flooding in the hydrotherapy unit should be corrected immediately.
23. The division's standing should be raised to the level where it would attract cooperation by the District medical schools in staffing the service.
24. A division of mental hygiene should be established to coordinate such services in the District.
25. Certification procedures should be streamlined.
26. Some patients requiring prolonged hospitalization should be certified directly to St. Elizabeth's Hospital with the patient's consent.

Dr. Wortis was called into the Gallinger Hospital problem by Dr. Robert H. Felix, head of the USPHS mental hygiene division, at the request of Dr. Ruhland and Dr. Sweeney. His survey followed a wave of criticism aroused when the spotlight was turned on the District's mental health problems.

Commissioner Mason recommended transfer of mental patients from Gallinger to St. Elizabeths Hospital. Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), chairman of the District Subcommittee on Health, Education and Recreation, said the suggestion should be given serious thought.

8 Escape As Fire Razes Home in Va.

A family of eight was left temporarily homeless yesterday when fire razed their two-story, six-room house at Springfield, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Thompson and their six boys, ranging in age from 1 to 9 years, were burned out when a flash fire, originating in an overheated kitchen stove, swept the frame dwelling and destroyed most of their clothing and furnshings, as well as a quantity of Christmas gifts.

The fire started around 9 a. m., according to Mrs. Thompson, who said the kitchen wall apparently caught fire as she was preparing breakfast for the boys. When she realized that the flames were beyond control, she calmly herded her youngsters from the house before calling the Franconia Fire Department.

Prompt work by firemen from the Franconia and Annandale volunteer departments prevented total destruction of the home, but it will be several weeks before repairs can make the dwelling habitable.

Mrs. Thompson and her children were given temporary shelter at the home of a neighbor, John W. Brookfield, Springfield postmaster. Last night, however, they moved in with relatives in the District.

Thompson, a District cab driver, had already left for work, and was not informed of the disaster until several hours later.

Summary of Report On Mental Service

Following is the text of the summary of the 35-page report made by Dr. Samuel Bernard Wortis, United States Public Health Service Consultant, on his three-day inspection of the psychopathic division of Gallinger Hospital. Dr. Wortis is director of Bellevue Psychiatric Hospital in New York City and Professor of Psychiatry and Neurology at New York University College of Medicine. The survey was made at the request of Dr. Robert H. Felix, Chief of the Mental Hygiene Division of the U. S. P. H. S.

Dear Dr. Felix:

I AM COMPLETING the report of my survey of the Gallinger Psycopathic Service, made at your request. Review of previous surveys of this psychopathic service made in 1938 and again in 1944, indicate that very little has been done to correct the conditions that obtained at these earlier dates.

The psychopathic department of the Gallinger Municipal Hospital does the City of Washington no credit.

Buildings: The buildings of the psychopathic division are in a deplorable state. The original structure was built in 1923 and one of the defects of the institutoin is its architectural and structural arrangement. The unit would have been much more wisely planned as a single building instead of four buildings.

Moreover, the wards of the psychopathic hospital unit are drab, depressing and barnlike. The wards badly need painting; water has soaked through the walls in many places and blistered the paint and plaster. Most of the ward equipment is old and defective. Other divisions (i. e., the medical and surgical wards) of the Gallinger Hospital are kept in good repair, but it appears that the psychopathic service has been given little attention.

In my complete report I will include a survey which has been made with the help of Mr. Gutterson, the United States Public Health Service architect, concerning what can be done with the present building. However, any change in the present building would only be a make-shift gesture. Ultimately an entirely new psychopathic division should be erected.

The present plant does not provide for necessary segregation of different types of patients. At the present time, only white and colored, male and female, are segregated. There is no adequate provision at the present time for the segregation of persons with tuberculosis and other contagious diseases. Moreover, there is no provision for segregation of seniles, alcoholics, prisoners, adolescents, children, medically and surgically-ill patients, psychoneurotics and severely disturbed psychotic patients. All are thrown in together.

Ultimately the Gallinger Psychopathic Service must make provision for the care of each of these categories of patients.

THE PRESENT structure does not permit of adequate medical or nursing care.

Staff and Services: There are approximately 4000 admissions per year to this service and there are only five full-time (40 hour per week) physicians staffing this unit. These men are overworked, underpaid and so harrassed by the volume of clinical responsibility, that they are not able to give patients even the necessary basic psychiatric and medical study and care. At the present time, this service acts only as a distributing service.

A larger staff with a great variety of medical and psychiatric skills is needed to adequately do the work required of this division. The staff needs to be enlarged to 15 full-time psychiatrists and there should be an adequate number of residents and interns to help with the necessary basic study diagnosis and treatment of patients admitted to this service.

There is only one psychologist who devotes only three fourths of her time to the Psychopathic Division. No modern psychiatric service with this large admisson rate can run properly without an adequate staff of psychologists. A minimum of 3 psychologists is essential for this divison.

Additional help is needed in the Department of Occupational, Recreational and Hydrotherapy. The equipment in these departments is archaic. The entire staff of physicians, nurses and the personnel in the related services is doing a heroic job under terribly trying circumstances. Additional secretarial help is needed so that patients' records can be completed more quickly and their discharge from the hospital facilitated.

At the present time the total nursing and attending staff assigned is 74 personnel. A total of 113 is recommended. The 40-hour week, holidays and illness make it necessary for an increased nursing and attendant staff to cover these contingencies, and still have enough help on the wards for the mentally ill patients. It is physically impossible for 5 physicians and 74 nurses and attendants to do the work for which 15 physicians and 113 nurses are needed. I marvel that they are able to do as well as they do. I am sure they are driven and harrassed and overburdened by responsibilities.

There is need for messengers, reception clerks and stenographers to facilitate the work of this unit. Moreover, there is urgent need for more extensive cooperation between the medical and nursing staff.

This psychiatric service is an important and essential function of Gallinger Municipal Hospital and the City of Washington. It should have a large Outpatient Department for the care and treatment of psychoneurotics, children, alcoholics, and for the follow-up study of patients who have been in the hospital. Moreover, it should have a psychiatric in-patient service for children. Unnecessary restraints are used occasionally because of the shortage of adequate numbers of ward personnel.

The service will not improve unless additional personnel are added. Physicians and nurses are difficult to obtain for this work since other similar governmental services pay much higher salaries and the conditions under which persons work in other agencies are much more attractive. Until the staff is increased and the auxiliary services brought up to average effectiveness, it will not be possible to attract house staff, nursing staff or related teaching relationships with th medical schools.

IT IS A disgrace to the City of Washington that this essential health service should have been permitted to deteriorate to its present deplorable condition.

Despite the shortage of personnel, the hospital is clean but the poverty and drabness of the place is outstanding and depressing. As you know, I've recently returned from Austria on a medical teaching mission. Only in that defeated country did I find an occasional psychopathic division as neglected as in the Gallinger Psychopathic Division.

Coordination of Psychiatric Services: The suggestion has been made by some that it would be advisable to close the Gallinger Psychopathic Service and send all mentally ill patients directly to the St. Elizabeths Hospital. At the present time approximately 300 patients yearly are sent from Gallinger on emergency commitment to St. Elizabeths Hospital. In this regard may I suggest that provision should be made in the law for voluntary and direct certification to St. Elizabeths Hospital. Also patients suffering with mental illness that will require prolonged hospitalization might be sent directly to St. Elizabeths Hospital.

However, this will still leave a large residue of mentally-ill patients who will benefit from good short-term psychiatric care in the psychiatric division of the Gallinger Hospital. The experience of similar psychopathic units in general hospitals is that approximately 70 per cent of patients can be returned to useful function in the community after short-term intensive treatment, thereby avoiding the need and trauma of legal certification.

Moreover, every modern general hospital has urgent need to enlarge its psychiatric service for the more comprehensive medical care of all sick persons. It would be a step backward in medical responsibility and health promotion if the psychopathic division of the Gallinger Municipal Hospital were curtailed or closed. I daresay the hospital's function to the community would be seriously impaired, if a penny-pinching policy prevailed in this matter.

There is need for both the Gallinger Psychopathic Service and the St. Elizabeths Psychiatric Hospital in the City of Washington.

I have reviewed the 1938 and 1944 surveys of this division, and it appears that many of these recommendations were made before, but apparently very little has been done. What is needed is not another survey but direct action to correct this unhealthy and deplorable situation. The superintendent of the hospital (Dr. Sweeney), the District health officer (Dr. Gilbert) and the director of the nursing service (Miss Ritter) all have complained of the many defects of this service. Action at higher levels of responsibility is urgently needed. Another survey cannot substitute for adequate appropriations to correct these defects.

Sincerely yours,
S. Bernard Wortis, M. D.

2 Court Rulings on U. S. Job Layoffs to Affect Veterans

case on the ground that the veterans hadn't fought through their appeals to the Civil Service Commission. However, the attorney for the veterans immediately petitioned the court to reopen the case to consider additional evidence.

The 20 demoted veterans rested their case on the argument that the 1912 Act was still in effect. Civil Service contends the veterans act of 1944 superceded it.

The 1912 act would prohibit the reduction in grade of any veteran who has an efficiency rating of good or better so long as there is a nonveteran in his grade, status, seniority, and qualifications notwithstanding. In other words, an experienced career nonveteran would have to be demoted before a temporary veteran of a few months service under it.

Judge J. Cullen Ganey stated in his opinion that he was "inclined to agree with the plaintiffs that the act is still in force," but he added that the contrary position of Civil Service is not "unreasonable."

In seeking to reopen the case, the veterans are said to be armed with an important letter from Chairman Rees of the House Civil Service Committee. Rees is said to have written the veterans that it was his understanding that the act of 1944 was not intended to take any benefits away from them. Rees was on the committee that drafted the act.

If the 1912 act is eventually declared to be effective, it would result in a drastic overhauling of the entire Civil Service system of layoffs and demotions. It would be conceivable, for example, that a career nonveteran with 30 years of service would have to be fired before a temporary veteran with 3 days of service.

INTERIOR: A new plan to change the working hours for employes in this department is being debated. It is from 9 to 5:30 instead of 7:45 to 4:15.

The Budget Bureau has overruled Secretary Krug's plan to have his employes work from 8:30 to 5. The bus and streetcar operaters told the bureau that their cars were already overloaded at those periods.

Instead, budget officials have suggested the 9 to 5:30 schedule. So, if there is any change in Interior's work day, that must be it.

Jews, Arabs Battle Anew

fighters to bolster Arabs in Palestine, and Prince Faour of the Fadl tribe said his men had crossed the border into Palestine and were already in the fighting.

Late into the night under a harvest moon tracer bullets arched in sporadic firing over the historic old city of Jerusalem, whose Damascus Gate bombing caused 15 deaths and injured almost 40 persons.

Police said the attackers in a Jewish taxi raked an Arab bus with automatic weapon fire as the bus prepared to leave for Nablus, then tossed a small bomb into the crowded street under the gate.

Two carloads of members of the Arab youth group Munazimet Shabab gave chase to the taxi and caught it about a mile away. The Arabs said they killed one Jew and wounded two others, then brought the taxi back to the gate to "burn it for our people."

The enraged Arabs hurled stones and poured gunfire into the burning vehicle.

British police in armored cars, jammed bumper to bumper, blocked the wide stone gate. Police opened fire in an attempt to restore order, and in the exchange two British constables were killed.

The military banned all Jewish taxis from the streets of Jerusalem effective at 6 a. m. tomorrow until tension ceases.

Today's violence reached for the first time into Bethlehem when an Arab doctor was shot to death not far from the Church of Nativity. He headed a government mental hospital. The killing was believed to have been in retaliation for the shooting of a Jewish doctor yesterday at Beit Safafa, south of Jerusalem.

A Jewish Agency official said he had no information concerning two Jewish refugee ships, the Pan York and the Pan Crescent, reportedly en route to Palestine from the Black Sea with nearly 14,000 visa-less Jews.

(In London British and Panamanian sources said Britain secretly approached the governments of Panama, Turkey, Bulgaria and Romania in vain attempts to stop the ships from sailing.

(British Admiralty sources said heavy units of the Mediterranean fleet were moving into position to augment destroyers blockading the Palestine coast for the first time in the history of illegal Jewish immigration.

(The informants said the heavy units, including an aircraft carrier and two cruisers, were being used because the two immigrant ships, sailing under Panama registry, were the largest yet to have set out for Palestine, and because boarding operations inside territorial waters are expected to be "more involved than usual.")

(A foreign office spokesman said a large number of the Jews aboard were believed to be "tough" young men, many of whom were armed.)

British transport moved out of Haifa harbor for Cypus today with 683 Jews from central Europe who tried to enter the Holy Land without immigration certificates. They were taken from the 200-ton schooner "November 29," named for the day the U. N. voted on partition. The British intercepted the vessel outside Haifa harbor.

London, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—A Foreign Office spokesman charged today that two former American freighters, now attempting to run the British blockade off Palestine, sailed with the connivance of the Communist-dominated Romanian and Bulgarian governments.

Implying that Russia had a hand in the incident, the spokesman pointed out that the Romanian and Bulgarian regimes were in "closest" relations with the Soviet Union.

There were indications that the arrival of the two ships, Pan York and Pan Crescent, off Palestine might precipitate a major crisis in British-Jewish relations.

The Colonial Office said that it was determined that the ships should not land and that all the Jews aboard them would be shunted to refugee-crowded Cyprus.

Turkish authorities at Istanbul quoted Jews aboard the ships as saying:

"The only way the British can stop us is to sink us with heavy guns and they don't dare do that. We will fight any boarding attempt."

There were rumors here the two ships bore numbers of trained Communist agitators assigned to foment even greater disorder in Palestine.

Man Found Hange After Requesting Medical Attention

The body of French-Armstrong, 45, unemployed, was found hanging by a sash cord from the second floor balustrade at 521 7st st. sw. yesterday afternoon by a Health Department doctor.

Armstrong had telephoned the Fourth Precinct Saturday asking for medical attention. Dr. William Lewis found the body when he responded to the call yesterday. He said Armstrong had been dead from six to eight hours.

Detective Sergt. George Cook said a letter dated December 20, postmarked Pittsburgh, from Armstrong's wife, Josie, indicated she had left him and refused to return.

Aid Plan to Transfer Ships Held Threat to U. S. Security

The proposed Marshall Plan sale and transfer of 500 American ships to European nations "holds a grave threat" to our maritime industry and national security, the National Federation of American Shipping declared yesterday.

The federation, which claims to speak for 90 per cent of dry cargo American shipping, claimed that the savings resulting from the proposed sales and chartering did not justify the risk involved.

Ship Program Cited

It said the European Recovery Program, as proposed to Congress by the President, called for the sale to the 16 "Marshall Plan" countries of 200 American ships, and the temporary transfer to foreign charter of "up to 300" more.

This would mean, the federation said, the delivery abroad of 25 per cent of our prospective reserve fleet, and more than half as many ships as now comprise our privately owned merchant marine.

The transfers, plus the foreign nations' building programs, will mean that by 1951 European countries will have shipping tonnages 25 per cent above their prewar figure, the federation said. It added that our foreiegn competition will then be "far stronger than in 1939 when we carried less than 30 per cent of our own imports and exports."

The federation presented a calculation purporting to show that the saving to the American taxpayer, through the proposed sales and charterings would be only 213 million dollars. This would be only 1 or 2 per cent of the proposed recovery expenditure.

"Why should the future of American shipping be sacrificed for a small economy?" the federation asked. It contended that the proposal would throw 20,000 to 25,000 American seamen out of work, and would build up foreign merchant fleets at the expense of our own maritime industry.

Free Service Mail To End With 1947

By The Associated Press

After midnight Wednesday, men and women of the armed services will have to pay for their first-class postage like everybody else.

Since March 27, 1942, all they have had to do is write "free" in the upper righthand corner of the envelope, with their name, serial number and address in the left-hand corner.

The free mail law expires at the same moment 1947 passes out, but a bill by Representative Clason (R., Mass.) to extend it two years is before the House Armed Services Committee.

Hagerstown Is Sued For Flood Damages

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 29 (AP).—W. Howard Roney has filed suit against the City of Hagerstown for $8000 damages because of losses to stock when water from a heavy rainstorm last August 16 flooded the basement of his downtown establishment.

In his bill of complaint, Roney contends the city was negligent in the maintenance and operation of storm drainage facilities.

Alexandria Budget Up For Hearing

Alexandria's proposed 1948 budget will be exposed to public discussion for the first time at a public hearing tonight at 7:30 in the Alexandria Corporation Court quarters.

The measure calls for record appropriations totaling $3,227,749, or $744,355 over the current budget. Despite the increase, City Manager Nicholas A. Colasanto said yesterday the total is "at least a million dollars short of what we actually need to operate the city next year."

The hearing, required by the law, was set for the Corporation Court room instead of City Council chamber, because the court quarters can accommodate a larger number of persons.

Of the 45 proposed budget items, the largest increase is asked for construction, set at $284,573 in contrast to the current year's figure of $47,626. This would provide for an extensive program of new streets and sewers.

To provide additional revenues, City Council would increase the real estate tax rate from $2.50 to $2.75 per $100 evaluation, and the personal property tax rate from $2.80 to $3.00.

While virtually all items represent increases over current figures, many departments are not slated to receive the totals they requested. The school board has been assigned a budget of $846,971, or $16,300 less than was asked.

In addition to hearing public views on the budget, Council is also scheduled to discuss a proposed business and professional license tax designed to net an additional $200,000 a year.

Mathematics Expert Fined For Speeding

Higher mathematics failed to convince Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens yesterday that Haig Galajikian, 60, of Aberdeen, Md., former Princeton mathematics professor, was not guilty of speeding.

Judge Owens, in Hyattsville Police Court, imposed a fine of $100 and costs for exceeding a speed of 70 miles an hour.

The conviction automatically carries suspension of the defendant's driver license, but an appeal was noted by Lee I. Hecht, Baltimore attorney, which stays suspension until trial in Circuit Court.

Galajikian was arrested November 29 by Maryland State Policeman Earl Griffith on Baltimore blvd., near Muirkirk. Griffith said the defendant was traveling between 80 and 85 miles an hour. He also charged him with crossing a white line.

The white-line count was dismissed when Galajikian said he had to cross the line to pass a car which refused to give right of way. Galajikian, now president of the Harford Metal Products Co. and of Haig House, Inc., a company constructing a new-type steel house, admitted he was driving faster than 60, but said "it is a simple law of physics that I couldn't have been traveling that fast."

Galajikian said the officer had passed him going the other way and had turned around to follow him. He contended it was a physical impossibility for the policeman to have paced his car and caught him in 2½ miles had he been driving at the speed charged.

The higher mathematics cited by the former professor failed to impress the judge, who imposed the $100 fine in the speeding case. Hecht then noted an appeal to the Circuit Court.

Galajikian said he intends to bring expert testimony, including several prominent physicists to court to prove his contention.

Golf Club Sued For Security By Bondholder

A suit to force the Congressional Country Club to provide security for $143,000 in "outstanding and unpaid" bonds was filed yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court.

Plaintiff in the suit, which named as defendants the Congressional County Club, Inc., and several of its trustees, is James O'Donnell, former Washington druggist.

O'Donnell said he filed the suit on his own behalf to obtain security in land owned by the club for his $27,100 in second trust bonds and on behalf of "numerous others with like interests."

The suit claims that after reorganization and foreclosure of the club in 1940, approximately $150,000 in second trust bonds was in default. Bondholders, he said, were promised an 80-acre tract on River Road north of the club as security. The tract, the suit estimates, is worth more than $100,000.

At a recent club membership meeting, O'Donnell claimed, it was agreed to sell the 80-acre tract and the club has refused his demand to convey the tract to the second trust bondholders.

Man With 18 Boxes Of Matches Denies Setting Costly Fire

Philadelphia, Dec. 29 (AP).—A 21-year-old man carrying a paper bag containing 18 boxes of matches and a flashlight was arrested today in the rear of five downtown buildings destroyed by fire yesterday.

Fire Marshal George Gallagher said the man—identified as Edward K. Lannon, 21, first admitted, then denied, he started the blaze which caused an estimated one-million-dollar damage.

Victor Emmanuel

The death of Victor Emmanuel III removes a man who played a salient part in the shaping of modern history. But this was only because he happened also to be a king, and, as such, the creator of Mussolini. On October 28, 1922, when Marshal Badoglio was commanding the garrison of Rome, Mussolini's Blackshirts marched on Rome. Badoglio declared they could be dispersed with one machine gun company, but the King refused to give his permission. "Not a whiff of grapeshot," he is reported to have said, thereby giving the government to the man who subsequently called himself Il Duce, and giving himself as Mussolini's captive and lackey. Victor Emmanuel from then on countersigned one venture after another in foreign conquest till Mussolini's overweening ambitions brought disaster upon him—and the House of Savoy.

Perhaps there is some redemption of the King's pusillanimous conduct in those latter days when the King became the center of the coup that brought about the downfall of Mussolini and the beginning of Italy's co-belligerency with the Allies. The data are still too sketchy to be trustworthy. We have seen nothing, however, which persuades us to alter our judgment during the war that the King's effort was nothing more than a selfish effort to save the skin of the House of Savoy. And he could not save it because he had already sacrificed it by long identification with Mussolini. The King-lovers, including Mr. Churchill, never could understand this, but at last they found out that the job of forgetting history was not as facile for the Italian people as it was for them. The contempt in which the people held the King showed the world that he and his dynasty were through. It was not a distinguished dynasty. Cavour was its parent, and, deprived of his genius, it rapidly relapsed into that mediocrity which had characterized it throughout the 800-odd years of its predynastic princeling career.

Jumping On Mr. Welles

Argentine ineptness almost amounts to genius. Here is the Argentine Ambassador, Dr. Oscar Jvanissevich, taking Mr. Sumner Welles to task for something that even a schoolboy would have known could not possibly happen. A booklet issued by Americans for Democratic Action referred to President Peron as "treacherous." The Ambassador thought that since Mr. Welles had indorsed the general conclusion of the report, he agreed with everything that had been written in it. As is usually the case, however, the reservation had been made, and issued with the report, that Mr. Welles and others who indorsed the general objective of ADA's statement did not necessarily approve of all the details. In addition, Mr. Welles had specifically taken exception to the reference to President Peron, though the Ambassador did not know this at the time of his protest.

What interests us is that the embassy is so lacking in a sense of proportion that it should have entertained such a notion about Mr. Welles. Mr. Welles, to our knowledge, has never praised President Peron, in the manner of our Ambassadors in Buenos Aires since Mr. Braden, yet he has never criticized him. And he is renowned as an architect of Pan Americanism, a friend of the Latin governments, and a jealous defender of their sovereignty. Whatever he may think about Peron personally, he hides any harsh opinion he may have of him out of scrupulous regard for his concept of hemispherical solidarity. In this we think he is mistaken. A solidarity of good neighbors which rests upon ignoring examples of bad neighborliness we have found from time to time in the policies of President Peron is not very solid. It may be that the embassy's jumping on Mr. Welles is a sign of a bad conscience in this respect.

U. N. Correspondents

Chagrin should be distributed about evenly between the United Nations and the United States in the matter of the two disputed correspondents arrested for deportation and then released after a protest by U. N. General Secretary Trygve Lie. The arrest of the two men by Justice Department immigration authorities was unnecessarily hasty and precipitate; they should have consulted the U. N. first. It seems doubtful, however, that the men in question were bona fide correspondents entitled to U. N. accreditation; certainly the U. N. officials should have discussed the cases with the Department of State, and Mr. Lie's remarks concerning them might well have been more temperate and tactful.

The State Department is on indisputable ground, of course, when it insists upon the sovereign right of the United States "to challenge the bona fides of any alien journalist seeking to enter this country or already in this country." The United Nations headquarters agreement, recognizing this sovereign right, provides that correspondents shall be accredited by the U. N. only after consultation with State Department officials. But the department needs to be reminded, perhaps, that it has no right to exclude bona fide journalists on the basis of their political opinions. The department was so maladroit in its restriction of the French journalist, Pierre Courtade, because he represented a Communist publication, as to warrant suspicion in the current cases that it was again politically motivated. The department's right to assert the sovereignty of the United States as against the authority of the United Nations ought to be employed most sparingly if at all. The U. N., of course, ought to respect such restraint by exercising great care that those it accredits, regardless of politics, are indisputably members of the working press.

Anticlimax

It is interesting to know that, even though the President has been denouncing speculation on the commodity exchanges, the White House physician, Gen. W. H. Graham, is listed among the speculators in wheat. That disclosure will doubtless prove embarrassing to General Graham and to the President. We fail to see in it, however, any real element of scandal. On the contrary, the publication of the list of speculators on public payrolls, following statements by former Governor Stassen, Representative Andresen and others suggesting the existence of a major scandal, is a decided anticlimax.

We must remember that there is no law prohibiting Government employes from speculating on the commodity exchanges. Since the President has positively denounced such speculation and accused the speculators of accelerating the upward surge of food prices, it is clear that Federal employes cannot indulge in transactions of this sort without undercutting the policy of the Government of which they are a part. By continuing to speculate on the grain exchanges they necessarily embarrass the Administration and make its task of curbing speculative bidding for scarce commodities the more difficult.

What the public has been led to believe, however, is that insiders in the Government service have been lining their pockets by buying and selling grain on the commodity exchanges on the basis of confidential information as to Administration policies and purchasing plans. The case of General Graham does not appear to be of this kind. His statement of yesterday says that the handling of his account was left wholly to the discretion of a Washington broker; that when he learned on October 7 that a small amount of grain was held in his name, he ordered it sold whether at a profit or loss; and that he has no commodity holdings at present. Secretary Anderson's report also indicates that, instead of profiting by inside information, General Graham, or his broker acting for him, sold 10,000 bushels of wheat futures on September 19 after the price had taken a nosedive.

It is well to keep in mind that the list of speculators released yesterday covers only public employes who had positions in wheat futures on the Chicago Board of Trade as of September 17, 1947, and those who entered the market on the following three days. In other words, the list may not be complete. Only a full investigation is likely to satisfy Congress or the public in this matter. Meanwhile the scandal-seekers will find slim picking in yesterday's disclosures.

The Stimson Memoirs

Mr. Stimson's memoirs, judging from the first installment, should be of considerable interest and value to historians of the war, for behind the facade of dullness Mr. Stimson permits himself a considerable candor. He gives us, for example, a glimpse into some of the wrangling that went on throughout the war between the British and American military leaderships, mainly over the questions of strategy. There was also, it seems, a considerable disagreement between the War Department and President Roosevelt on strategic questions. Mr. Stimson, strongly under the influence of General Marshall, was all for an immediate invasion of the Continent via the English Channel from bases in Britain. The British, still haunted by "the shadows of Passchendale and Dunkirk," were for war of slow attrition centering in the eastern Mediterranean, the Balkans and Greece.

The North African invasion appears to have been mainly Mr. Roosevelt's idea, and Mr. Stimson had many misgivings about it which he confided to none but General Marshall. Mr. Stimson seems to believe that the tactical success of the North African campaign was owing much less to the wisdom of Mr. Roosevelt's decision than to fortuitous events, wholly unforeseen when the decision was made, notably the Russian victory at Stalingrad and the British victory at El Alamein. Even so, Mr. Stimson argues that > the tactical success of TORCH does not of itself dispose of the broader questions of strategy which lay behind the differences between the War Department and the President . . . If Stimson or Marshall had been commander in chief, the invasion of France would in all probability have been launched in 1943 . . . Would the war have been ended sooner? . . . No certain answer is possible and the matter is here left open. All that Stimson could say was that if he were faced by the problems of 1942, he would argue again as he had then.

It was the further opposition of the British to the plan of a frontal invasion of France that led to the protracted and costly Sicilian and Italian campaigns. The President was subsequently converted to General Marshall's view, but Prime Minister Churchill's position remained one of stubborn disapproval until the Tehran Conference, where, overruled by the combined votes of Roosevelt and Stalin, he grudgingly assented.

But Mr. Churchill felt that if there must be an invasion of the Continent to be directed, as agreed upon, by an American, that General Marshall was the logical man. Mr. Stimson "knew that in the bottom of his heart it was Marshall's secret desire above all things to command this invasion force into Europe." The decision to appoint General Eisenhower was the President's, and, according to Mr. Stimson, he did so on the ground that Eisenhower would be more useful in Europe than as Chief of Staff, succeeding Marshall, "because he was unfamiliar with what had been going on in the Pacific and would be far less able than Marshall to handle Congress."

A whole chapter of Mr. Stimson's book is devoted to a defense of the late General Stilwell in his conflicts with Chiang Kai-shek, with the British and with various American military and diplomatic officials in the Far East.

> To Stimson it was not surprising that all this intrigue (against Stilwell) was in the end effective in the mind of President Roosevelt . . . Although Mr. Roosevelt was by no means blind to the weaknesses of the Chinese government, he was unschooled on the details on which Stilwell's tactical and political position was founded and he was tied by personal sympathy to the support of (General) Chennault. For his information on China he often depended on "personal representatives" who were usually easy dupes of the wonderfully charming circle around the throne at Chungking . . . It seemed doubtful to Stimson whether the President ever realized how much his own personal emissaries and his willingness to hear attacks on Stilwell contributed to the latter's difficulties.

Mr. Stimson, admitting that a positive hatred had grown up between Chiang and Stilwell, seems to concur in Stilwell's judgment of the Generalissimo as "an ignorant, suspicious, feudal autocrat with a profound but misconceived devotion to the integrity of China and to himself as her savior." Toward the other great controversial figure of American foreign relations in wartime, General Charles de Gaulle, Mr. Stimson is more charitable. He found the French leader "personally charming," but he also seems to perceive some justice in Mr. Roosevelt's estimate of M. de Gaulle as "a narrow-minded French zealot with too much ambition for his own good and some rather dubious views on democracy." Mr. Stimson also indicates a certain sympathy with Secretary Hull in whom "the very mention of De Gaulle was enough to produce an outburst of skillful Tennessee denunciation."

Nevertheless, Mr. Stimson thought that Mr. Roosevelt had made a mistake in not establishing closer relationships with De Gaulle and the Free French Committee. General Eisenhower, it appears, was of the same opinion. Making all allowances for the irritations caused by General de Gaulle's tactlessness, inflexibility and egotism, Mr. Stimson believes that in his case the President and the State Department were guilty of a "miscalculation that cooler statesmanship might have avoided, and the result was that the American Government never had the advantages of a genuinely close relationship with the France of the liberation."

Test Tube

The problem of illegitimacy, intensified by the war, is now being complicated by the growing number of test tube babies. Children born as a result of artificial insemination run well into the thousands, writes Dr. Stuart Abel of Northwestern University in Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics. He calls for a clear-cut court ruling on the legitimacy of such children, whose status now, he says, is in confusion. That there are more of such children than is generally realized is shown by a survey cited by Dr. Abel in which, in 1941, 10,000 pregnancies by artificial methods were reported among 30,000 physicians.

This method by which childless married couples obtain offspring and childless married women gratify their desires for motherhood is termed by Dr. Abel a "modern procedure," and he thinks society should take a "modern stand" on it. However, many elements in society are strongly opposed to it on moral, psychological and even physical grounds. But whether or not society approves, the children have to be considered. Are they to be legally classed with the children of unmarried mothers, of whom about 100,000 a year are now being born? Before the world, of course, they have ostensible fathers. But accurate official birth records have to be kept in event of future confusion over heredity and to prevent intermarriage. And birth certificates are becoming increasingly important as proof of citizenship, for employment, travel, collection of insurance and social security benefits.

Meanwhile a movement is growing for what is called "antishame" legislation to protect all children born out of wedlock. The National Association of Women Lawyers is seeking to have all States remove references to illegitimacy from birth certificates. Nine States now have such laws, but in many others the fact of illegitimacy must be noted on the certificate. Great Britain, which also has increasing illegitimacy as a social legacy of war, has a proposed law that might hold a solution for all children born unconventionally. This would authorize a simplified birth certificate containing no reference to the child's parentage. But complete vital statistics still would be maintained at the government record office and would be available for a small fee on specific request.

Inadequate Amnesty

I have received the report of the President's Amnesty Board containing the list of pardons granted to a number of conscientious objectors to military service.

Having read the report, I cannot convey my sense of chagrin and dismay over its inadequacies and discrepancies. Throughout the war I made it my business to be well informed of the problems of conscientious objection. I knew many of the objectors personally, and find very few names of those whom I knew best on the list of those pardoned.

Surely one does not have to profess religion in America to have a conscience. Nor does one have to profess religion to recognize that war today is immoral and devastating to society. The pardons granted to conscientious objectors are so ludicrously inadequate that they do the Nation more harm than good. It would be far better for a government to grant no pardons than to presume to set up criteria for religious convictions which result in the difference between conviction of felony and pardon.

To decide that men who are willing to go to prison for the sake of their convictions that war is wrong politically and socially are less worthy than those who do so on formal religious grounds is to remove morality from politics and reduce political decisions to mere expediency. Every conscientious objector was a political offender in the sense that he was out of step with the policies of his Government. As long as governments act solely from the basis of expediency and remain indifferent to ethical consideration, it is not surprising that criminals who have defied society solely for their personal gain have received more generous treatment than those who have tried to serve others by following their conscience.

The efforts of the Amnesty Board to distinguish between sincere religious conscientious objectors and those motivated by equally sincere, or even more sincere, ethical considerations based on political and social grounds, constitute a menace to the principles underlying civil liberties and are an insult to those who take politics seriously from a moral point of view.

Arlington Schools

The members of the Arlington branch of the American Association of University Women are deeply concerned about the situation resulting from the action of the incumbent school board of Arlington County, namely, bringing a suit concerning the legality and validity of the referendum authorizing an elected school board. The executive board, authorized by vote of the general membership, wishes to make clear the stand of AAUW.

It would seem that the referendum was placed before the voters of the county after due notice and publicity were given the issue. The vote returned is interpreted as the expression of the will of the people. The majority indicated the desire for an elected school board.

It would appear that the time to question the legality or validity of the referendum is long past. The intervening months between the decision to have an elected school board, and the selection of the members of that board, might well have been the time for question. To wait until the newly elected board may be blocked in its planning for the ensuing year, indicates petty politics, rather than a true interest in good public education.

We are interested primarily in acquiring for the children of Arlington County the finest education possible today. We are interested in the position of the Arlington County teachers, and a chance for them to enjoy pride and security in their profession, and pride in the results shown in the Arlington County school system. This they cannot do in the present situation. We feel that the future is dependent upon the quality of the basic public school education.

We are not concerned with individuals or personalities. We feel the prime issue is the continued progress in education, to be accomplished in the manner usually expressed in a democracy by the choice of the people. This continued progress, which because of the rapid growth of Arlington County demands prompt action and long-term planning, is an utter impossibility in the present state of confusion.

Therefore, we wholeheartedly support the newly elected school board.

Overseas Jobs

For the second time in as many weeks I read that the Department of the Army needs people to fill overseas jobs. It seems it is having trouble getting clerical help. The Army has a regulation placing a limitation on the ages of women who can be sent overseas—35 for the European theater and 40 for the Asiatic.

I happen to be a victim (one of many) of this silly regulation. According to the Army, one midnight about a year and a half ago I suddenly became something quite different from what I was the preceding day—I forgot all that I had learned that made me a competent office worker; I forgot the broader knowledge that I had acquired about people and life; I immediately sagged into physical decay and mental decline, and so I couldn't go overseas.

No, says the Department of the Army talking to itself, let us send only girls who want to hoard a little money or catch a man; let us not bother with women who might want to go for some less superficial reason, women who might bring bright, lively, inquiring minds, as well as experience, to their new environment.

Do all the women in the world who don't live in the United States stop living when they reach 35 and/or 40?

Child Care Centers

On December 4, the Board of Public Welfare sent to the mothers of 13 children, some of whom are under school age and others school age children attending the Child Day Care Center located in the Grant Elementary School building at 22d and G sts. nw., a Christmas present to the effect that because of the low enrollment in the Grant Day Care Center it would be closed as of Christmas Eve.

It so happens that this is the last child day-care center in the northwest section of Washington, serving the employed parents who reside in the Georgetown, Mount Pleasant, and lower metropolitan areas, and who have no one to care for their children, except in a center located in the Truesdell School near the United States Soldiers' Home grounds.

There is a center located in Southeast Washington known as the "D" Street Center operated in four reconverted old dwellings which has a capacity of 60 children, but which has an enrollment of 69. I am informed by the Board of Public Welfare authorities that they propose to enlarge that school to care for more children, and to reopen a center in the annex to the Stuart Junior High School near 5th and D sts. ne., formerly known as the Carbery Day Care Center, because there is a "greater need" for day care centers in the eastern part of Washington; that it would be too hard on the parents and the children who reside close to the border of the Northwest section to cross town to attend the Grant Center, although they state that the children who use the Grant Center could without much trouble go to the Carbery Center.

It must be borne in mind that some of these parents using the Grant Center live in close proximity to the Grant Center and can walk with their children to school and walk to their places of employment, but if they are forced to go to the Eastern section of the city in order to have their children cared for, they will be required to pay carfare, get the child up an hour or two earlier every morning and keep it up an hour or two later in the evenings.

Congress saw fit to authorize and direct the Board of Public Welfare to establish and operate in the public schools and other suitable locations a system of nurseries and nursery schools for day care of school-age and under-school-age children of parents "who are employed and financially unable otherwise to provide for the day care of their children," and to authorize them to assess and collect from these parents such sums as in their opinion the parent could reasonably pay for the care of their children while at work. While the parents are more than willing that the "greater need" of the working parents in the eastern section of the city should be met, yet they feel they are being discriminated against when the last child day care center is taken away from them in the northwest part of Washington.

I have been informed that it is not the policy of the Board of Public Welfare to advertise the fact that there exist a child day care center in the Grant School or any other center, nor have they made any reasonable attempt to increase the enrollment at the center. It must be borne in mind that at the hearings before the Senate subcommittee on Senator McGrath's and Senator Capper's bill to continue the centers in force for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, Commissioner Mason was bitterly opposed to the day care centers.

It seems that the purpose and aim and motive behind the closing of the Grant Center is not confined to the low enrollment there, but is an arbitrary act on the part of the authorities to wreck the institution of child day care centers which you in your editorial of June 14, said in part:

"The day-care center program meets an urgent need of working mothers by providing places where their preschool-age children can play and learn during the hours when the mothers are necessarily absent from home. Without these centers, the mothers would be obliged to give up their jobs. The program, inaugurated during the war under Federal auspices, thoroughly deserves continuance, we think, as an appropriate and useful community service."

I am reliably informed that for the first half of the fiscal year the child day care center fund is $15,000 ahead of its $150,000 appropriation, and that it promises to be $30,000 ahead at the end of the fiscal year 1948, not accounting for approximately $40,000 paid by the parents for the care of the children in the operation of three day care centers for the Negro children and three day care centers for the white children. There were 12 centers, six colored and six white, in operation in 1946-47, but they all are being systematically closed.

Economic Cooperation

By Ernest Lindley

Lend-Lease Contrast

THE ECONOMIC cooperation bill drafted by the State Department to authorize the Marshall Plan for Europe is approximately five times as long as the Lend-Lease Act of March, 1941.

The ratio is set, in a rough way, even in the title. Economic Cooperation has nine syllables, Lend-Lease only two.

The preamble of the Lend-Lease Act, before the usual "Be it enacted" clause consisted of 13 words: "Further to promote the defense of the United States, and for other purposes."

The corresponding portion of the Economic Cooperation bill reads: "To promote the general welfare, national interest and foreign policy of the United States through necessary economic and financial assistance to foreign countries which undertake to cooperate with each other in the establishment and maintenance of economic conditions essential to a peaceful and prosperous world."

The Lend-Lease Act, after the preamble, immediately got down to brass tacks: definitions of terms, followed by crisp paragraphs of authorization. The Economic Cooperation bill follows its preamble with a statement of findings, a declaration of policy and a listing of purposes.

The bulk of extra wordage in the Economic Cooperation bill, however, is accounted for by detailed prescriptions for (1) administration and (2) the conditions to which the receiving nations are to bind themselves in formal agreements with the United States.

THE LEND-LEASE Act dumped the administrative program into the lap of the President, saying that he might "exercise any power of authority conferred on him by this Act through such department, agency, or officer as he should direct."

It also gave the President full discretion in setting the terms and conditions under which any foreign government should receive lend-lease aid.

Under present political circumstances, with the Republicans in control of both houses of Congress, no such sweeping delegation of powers to the President will be granted, even if they were desirable. The administrative scheme authorized by Congress probably will be different from that proposed by the State Department but almost certainly it will not be less lengthily set forth.

As to terms and conditions to be met by the European recipients, the tendency in Congress will be to add to and elaborate those outlined in the State Department bill.

Two of the most important provisions of the Economic Cooperation bill are relatively brief. One is the date of expiration; June 30, 1952. The other is the action specifically authorizing a maximum of 17 billion dollars in aid before that date and a maximum of 6.8 billion dollars for the first 15 months ending June 30, 1949. The purpose of both is to give assurance, and notice, that we intend to carry through a program for the recovery of Europe.

The Lend-Lease Act mentioned no specific sums. These were left entirely to the appropriation bills which followed, the first one being for seven billion dollars. The absence of a specific authorization in dollar amounts in the Lend-Lease Act was not a defect. An authorization is a ceiling. The ceiling may be raised by subsequent congressional action. But in the Lend-Lease Act it was considered preferable not to suggest any ceiling on the amount that the United States would spend.

IN THE END it may seem preferable to omit the authorization of any specific sums in the Economic Cooperation Act. Certainly, this would be better than a ceiling so low as to give the impression that we do not intend to carry through a real recovery program. If no specific sum is authorized, debate on amounts can be confined to the initial appropriation bill.

The date of expiration of the Economic Cooperation Act may be regarded abroad as the most convincing evidence of our purpose. The date proposed by the State Department, June 30, 1952, would show an intent to bring a genuine economic recovery in western Europe. An earlier date, especially one as early as the middle of 1949, would leave doubt as to our purposes.

Those who oppose a longer commitment, even by implication, may recall that Lend-Lease was originally authorized for only a little more than two years, until June 30, 1943, after which it was renewed annually. Long before the original expiration date, however, we were at war.

In the case of the Economic Cooperation bill, there is a special reason for an original lease of life of four years. This is that the estimates worked out by the Committee for European Economic Cooperation at Paris aim at full recovery in four years. Some of the participants are expected to be well on their feet in a shorter period. All may be. But assurance now of our continuing support for the duration of the program will encourage the European partners to embark on genuine recovery programs. It will relieve them of the fear that in the end they may have to turn to Moscow. It is vitally important, probably indispensable, if we are to get the results which we seek in the most economical way.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Diplomacy For Greece

THE SITUATION in Greece is obviously deteriorating in a way that will soon call for grave decisions. Though so much is hidden in a fog of propaganda, it seems to be reasonably clear that the proclamation of the Markos provisional government was made after the rebels had obtained de facto control of a small area in the mountains along the Albanian frontier. In this area, it appears, the government forces are for the present unable to enter, perhaps in the main because the mountain passes are inaccessible in winter. This would seem to give the rebels a foothold on Greek territory where they are not, as they have been hitherto, merely guerillas.

Lippmann

THE FULL seriousness of this development is not, I think, to be measured by the military assistance which the Balkan nations are giving, or may from now on give, to the rebel government in the mountains. We have given the regular Greek army 74,000 tons of military equipment, and all the food for the whole Greek army of 100,000 men; it is altogether unlikely that the Yugoslavs and Bulgarians could have come anywhere near giving anything like the same amount of help to the rebels who are not believed to number more than 20,000. It is even more unlikely that Belgrade and Moscow suppose that they can put more military equipment into Greece than we can, and that they have invented this rebel government to provide themselves with a legal pretext for engaging in such a competition.

The much more likely explanation is that the Markos government has been set up in order to provide a rallying point for the discontented and as a warning to the timid. For the present government, though nominally a freely elected government, quite plainly does not have genuine popular support. Its sorry record in the civil war shows that, and there are strong indications that some supporters of the government have begun to hedge, and to do business underground with the rebels. Now that a rebel government has been proclaimed, they will have someone to do business with.

The danger in Greece is, therefore, not so much an invasion from the north as a collapse from within. That is why we are hearing demands for promises from Washington that we shall increase our financial aid and that we shall also send American troops, as Mr. Reston's excellent report said the other day "to reassure the Greeks that they will not be deserted."

BEFORE we send any troops, the whole Greek problem will have to be reviewed. For to put American troops ashore on the mainland of Greece is a military undertaking of which the consequences are incalculable. It is not like landing some Marines in a backward country where there are no organized military forces to oppose them. The advocates of military intervention in Greece say that two American divisions would suffice to stiffen the Greek government and to "seal the border." They are the same experts who said last year that 300 million dollars and seventy-eight military advisers would suffice.

The fact is that if two divisions were put ashore in Greece, the whole military power of the United States will have to be committed to support them. If two divisions do not suffice, it will be necessary to send as many more divisions as are needed to accomplish the purpose for which the two divisions were sent. Now we do not have many divisions ready for active service. If, therefore, we are to consider sending two divisions, the Administration will have to go to Congress and ask for authority and money to activate a great many more divisions. For it would be in the highest degree imprudent to send a boy on a man's errand. If the situation demands American troops, then it demands at least a partial mobilization.

THIS WILL raise the question as to whether what is at stake on the Greek mainland is a vital interest, which must be supported at any cost, or whether what is at stake is prestige.

The best military opinion would hold, I believe, that the contest for the control of the eastern Mediterranean and the Middle East, will not be decided on the Greek mainland. The real importance of the Greek mainland is not strategic. It is political: having committed ourselves to the Greek government, its collapse would be a blow to our influence. We should have failed to do what we said very loudly we intended to do. It is to protect our prestige that military intervention is being proposed.

BUT THERE are other ways of protecting our prestige, and they should be tried before we increase our investment, and compound it by establishing a precarious military beachhead. The situation calls for diplomacy designed to extricate the United States from the position where its prestige is so dangerously involved with the fate of the Greek government.

By diplomacy I do not mean another public declaration, nor another public showdown in the United Nations, but diplomatic activity in all the important capitals of the world. We should ask for advice through diplomatic channels as to what the situation in Greece is and what should be done about it, having made it plain that we shall not retire from the eastern Mediterranean until the whole situation is stabilized. We should invite the middle powers—countries like Canada, Brazil, Sweden — to make proposals. We should attempt to discuss the issues directly with Moscow and with Belgrade, and we should solicit the good offices of the Czechoslovak and Polish governments in reestablishing communication with the Soviet Union and with Yugoslavia.

WE SHOULD NOT take a hard and fast position, asking everyone to line up with us or against us. We should insist that Greece is not an American problem as such but an international problem, and that we cannot solve it, and do not wish to solve it, unilaterally. We should reassert our desire for a settlement of the civil war, for the reconstruction of the Greek government, and for a Balkan peace settlement.

We should resume the practice of diplomacy, an art which has been almost forgotten since we were captured by the illusion that the rivalry of nations can be regulated by public pronouncements, from which as a matter of prestige no one can recede, and the collision of irresistible forces with immovable objects.

7000 Italians Cheer Delivery Of Friendship Cargo at Naples

Naples, Italy, Dec. 29 (AP).—Seven thousand persons, including 3000 orphans who waved paper Italian and American flags, attended ceremonies today marking delivery of the first cargo of Friendship Train food for distribution in Italy.

United States Ambassador James C. Dunn said the gift of food came "from the hearts of my fellow citizens in the United States," and emphasized it would be distributed by Italian and American welfare agencies on the basis of need "without regard to political creed or religious faith."

Vice Premier Randolfo Pacciardi, in thanking the American people in the name of the Italian government, said:

"I do not feel ashamed to say to the United States Ambassador how much we need these gifts. I am not ashamed to say this because the ambassador knows this is not a nation of beggars, but one which has done all it could to lift itself."

The first shipload of food for Italy, 1251 tons, arrived yesterday aboard the American steamship Exiria. The first train will leave tomorrow with stops at Rome, Florence, Bologna, Milan, Udine and Gorizia.

Railroads Ask Passenger Fare Boost in South

Eleven railroads in the South asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to let them increase one-way passenger fares 13.63 per cent and make similar increases in round-trip rates.

Their petition said higher fares are needed because of continued increases in operating costs "and to effect uniformity" in coach fare among the major southern carriers.

The 11 railroads kept their basic coach fares at 2.2 cents a mile when 26 other southern railroads last summer got ICCC authority to raise their coach rate 13.63 per cent to 2.5 cents per mile.

The commission at that time also granted a 6.06 per cent increase in the basic pullman car passenger fare to 37 southern railroads.

The lines requesting the authority are: the Albany and Northern; Central of Georgia; Florida East Coast; Gulf, Mobile and Ohio; Illinois Central; Louisville and Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis; Seaboard Air Line; and Tennessee Central.

Panama Rejection

By Sumner Welles

Affront To Sovereignty

THERE HAS BEEN much misunderstanding of the underlying reasons for the unanimous rejection by the Panamanian National Assembly of the agreement for defense bases.

Reaction in this country has varied from the angry and intemperate charges of "ingratitude" heard in some congressional circles to the repeated assertion by the press that the action of the Assembly was due to Communist influence or to rank Yankee-phobia.

It is true that Communist agitators played a part in inciting mass protests against the agreement. It is equally true that recent policies of the canal authorities by which the Panamanian people have been deprived of legitimate commercial opportunities in the zone, and which have discriminated against Panamanians in the matter of employment, have stimulated anti-American feeling.

But the isue which is primarily responsible seems to be wholly overlooked.

The treaty of 1903, which gave the United States the right to construct the Panama Canal, contained provisions which relegated Panama to the status of a protectorate. This treaty not only gave this Government the right to intervene in the republic, but it also gave it the power to expropriate any lands within the territory of Panama that it might unilaterally declare were needed for the defense or maintenance of the canal.

FOR 33 years this right of expropriation was exercised with little consideration for the susceptibilities or legitimate interests of the Panamanian people. It was not infrequently enforced with no real justification.

It is hard enough for a sovereign people to have their country divided by a corridor under alien jurisdiction. But the inevitable problems which the canal raises were greatly aggravated so long as no Panamanian citizen could be sure that his land might not be taken from him by American dictate, and so long as the Panamanian people saw a continuous extension of American jurisdiction over their territory.

The treaty of 1936 was negotiated by the Roosevelt Administration in order to eliminate such treaty provisions as these. It ended a host of injustices. It placed the relationship between the two countries on a basis of partnership. Both partners assumed responsibility for the adequate defense and maintenance of the canal. The new treaty laid the foundation for friendly cooperation.

Panama was one of the first American republics to declare war upon the Axis after Pearl Harbor. The Panamanian people carried out their obligations under the treaty of 1936 in spirit as well as in letter. Before the end of 1942 they had leased 134 bases in every part of the republic to the United States for defense purposes. Their only insistence was that when the war was over these sites should be promptly returned.

UNFORTUNATELY after VJ-Day the United States delayed unduly in returning these bases. After protracted legalistic quibbling 120 were handed back, but 14 were still retained. The government of Panama finally agreed to negotiate new leases to cover the bases still in American hands. The United States first demanded a 99-year lease for the large aviation base at Rio Hato, then 30 years, and finally 20. When the agreement was at length signed the tactics employed by this Government had necessarily created the impression throughout Panama that the United States was reverting to the practice of those prerogatives it had forsworn in the treaty of 1936.

Dr. Harmodio Arias, one of the New World's ablest statesmen, was President of Panama when the treaty of 1936 was negotiated. He recently declared that Panama has "the right and the duty to delegate to the United States the necessary authorization to establish defense bases 'in case of any threat of aggression that endangers the security of the republic or the neutrality or security of the canal.'"

He expressed the opinion that world conditions today create a situation in which every necessary measure must be taken to protect the canal. But he expressed with equal frankness his conviction that a lease giving the United States the right to hold Panamanian bases for so long a period as 20 years, solely because of present conditions, was "unreasonable and unwarranted" and therefore "incompatible with the letter and the spirit of the treaty of 1936."

I BELIEVE a great majority of Panamanians share these opinions. It is not that Panama is unwilling to comply with her obligation to cooperate in the defense of the canal. It is merely that the Panamanian people object to an alienation of some of their territory for a period of time longer than that which the existing emergency would seem to justify.

In view of the rejection of the proposed lease by the Panamanian Assembly this Government could have reached no wiser decision than to return every one of the bases immediately to the jurisdiction of Panama.

The action taken will do much to create confidence in the good will and in the good faith of this Government and to counteract the misunderstandings which have arisen. There is no reason to suppose that an agreement for the lease of such bases as may be necessary, cannot be reached if this Government is prepared to consent to a shorter term than that previously fixed, or that the government of Panama would not be disposed later to extend the lease should it then be demonstrated that world conditions made it necessary.

The step now taken by the United States will clear the atmosphere. We may hope that the irritations and resentments of the past few months will now be forgotten and that a new agreement within proper limitations may rapidly be concluded.

New Tests of Guided Missiles Made at Sea, Navy Announces

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Navy reported yesterday that additional firing tests of guided missiles have been staged at sea from warships of varying size.

Rear Adm. Daniel V. Gallery, assistant chief of naval operations for guided missiles, revealed the broader scope of the Navy's missile program in a magazine article. He said that tests afloat with the V-2 and smaller weapons of the type prove that missiles will give the Navy a greater punch than ever before.

In an article in Fairchild Engine and Airplane Co.'s house publication Pegasus, Gallery warns that guided missiles capable of flying across the ocean, though feasible, are "many years away."

Citing the V-2 firing from aboard an aircraft carrier last September, he said that it proves that the Navy is "capable of making a transoceanic weapon out of a missile having a range of only several hundred miles."

"Guided missiles," he added, "will give the Navy offensive power as never before. What it boils down to is that not only does the Navy need guided missiles, but guided missiles need a Navy."

"It would not be presumed, because the giant carrier Midway was used for the recent V-2 firing, that only the largest and heaviest ships fit into the picture. Firing tests of smaller missiles have been conducted from various other ships."

Naval officials would not reveal any details of these additional tests.

More of the Navy's research and development money, Gallery revealed, is going for guided missiles than any other project. Mentioning some of the obstacles which must be overcome before inter-continent rockets are feasible, he said.

"In guidance and control it means exploring the blind labyrinth of astronomical navigation and the 'lesser' problem of reducing a radar the size of a piano to a compact package resembling a small hat box."

The magazine also includes an article by Rear Adm. Felix Johnson, Navy public relations chief, asserting that the United States Fleet is America's "big stick which reminds the world of our foreign policy."

Declaring that "Our Navy is an air Navy," he added:

"A navy with a highly developed and integrated air arm is potent, highly flexible force capable of bringing that force to bear on most of the principal targets of the world."

Johnson declared that in the "troubled area" of the eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean Sea, "naval forces are a must." Appearance of a carrier in European waters, "nearly doubles the air combat strength of this country in that theater," he added.

Rear Admiral Charles A. Nicholson, assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, discussed the problems of supersonic flight in another article. Airplanes traveling at transonic speeds must have refrigeration to "avoid roasting the pilot and crew," he declared.

At supersonic speeds, he added, friction might heat the plane so much as to cause materials in the craft to disintegrate. Nicholson said that present jet engines "give us sources of almost unlimited power."

Bombers, he added, need no longer be the "slow lumbering workhourse of the past." Disparity between the speeds of bombers and fighters is fast dwindling, the Navy chief said, with present fighter craft having only a 50 miles an hour margin.

Bear's Curiosity About City Life Costs His Hide

Grants Pass, Ore., Dec. 29 (AP).—A shaggy, 500-pound bear that startled half this city was just a pelt today.

He ran afoul of a gun after a sightseeing tour through town that deluged police telephones with calls for help.

The bear came out of the hills and began walking down the middle of a city street yesterday.

Scores took up the chase. When they got too close, he swam the Rogue river, poked around Sheriff Loyd Lewis' back yard, then toured the city park. As bruin emerged, Foreman James Leatham shot him with a rifle.

All Fuel Oil Users Must Conserve

THE OIL INDUSTRY IS DOING THIS →

To meet the huge demand for oil in America today, the oil industry is producing more oil products than ever before in the nation's history.

The industry is spending over 4 billion dollars to find new sources of supply, to expand refinery and distribution facilities!

BUT YOU MUST DO THIS →

If you burn fuel oil or kerosene in your home, just follow these four simple rules. You'll not only help to avoid a fuel pinch... you'll also save money on your fuel bills!

1. Keep temperature as low as possible, consistent with health in the daytime, 60 or below at night.
2. Keep doors and windows closed. Close off rooms not in use. Draw shades at night.
3. Seal all leaks around doors and windows, to keep heat in, cold out.
4. Have your heating system checked for efficiency.

If everyone saves a little...there'll be enough for all!

OLD FASHIONED but still in style

What is Sour Mash?

"Sour Mash" is a type of whiskey distilled in the traditional, native Kentucky manner, which brought this state its fame for fine bourbon. It requires more time and is the most expensive bourbon whiskey made.

"Sour Mash" bourbon is not sour, but is smooth, fragrant, and full-flavored when made on a good formula by a distiller with the knowledge of this old-fashioned method.

When you see "Sour Mash" on the label of a reputable distiller, it is your assurance of quality. Few labels today carry the proud legend "Genuine Sour Mash" as does Old Fitzgerald —Kentucky's Favorite Bonded Bourbon.

Savings Rate More Than Doubled in U.S.

Americans are saving at more than twice their prewar rate, it was indicated by figures released yesterday by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The rate has increased steadily throughout 1947, from 1.8 billion dollars in the first quarter, to 2.4 billion dollars in the second, to 2.9 billion dollars in the third. This would mean a rate of 9.2 billion dollars for the full year as compared to only 4.1 billion dollars for 1940, the last prewar year for which these figures have been published.

There were several indications in the figures, however, that suggested that this higher rate of savings was not true for the public as a whole. Rather, it was by wealthier citizens. Some experts showed that lower income groups actually may be reducing the amount of their savings.

Checking Accounts Up

For example, the SEC said that an increase in bank accounts of 2.5 billion dollars in the third quarter was principally accounted for by a jump of almost two billion dollars in demand (checking) accounts.

This is an unusually heavy increase, of a form of saving generally used by more well-to-do persons. The increase in savings accounts, used by persons in more modest circumstances, was about 500 million dollars, or a lower rate than heretofore. It was only half the rate of increase of the first quarter.

Further, the SEC said that while individuals' holdings of Government bonds increased in the third quarter by 300 million dollars, practically all of that was in Series F and G bonds, the larger ones favored as investments by the more wealthy.

Series E bonds, bought by smaller savers, have been redeemed for several quarters at almost the same rate as they have been bought. In other words, sales were about equal to redemptions.

Saving Rate Doubles

Finally the figures showed a substantial increase in mortgage and consumer debt, probably due to borrowing by the "little man," while the investor class bought municipal and corporation securities.

As a whole, however, the rate of savings now is more than twice as high as it was prewar, despite higher living costs and income tax liabilities. The savings are even higher than prewar when measured in relation to national income. That is, individuals are saving a larger portion of a larger income.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—Grain futures were unsettled at the Board of Trade today, corn and wheat breaking around 3 cents a bushel at the opening and then advancing to cover, covering which later was followed by some support from cash interests.

Observers said the amount of trade was only fair and attributed the light dealings to the holidays and a disposition by traders to keep close to shore until developments in Washington are cleared.

At the finish wheat was ⅛ to 1⅛ higher than Saturday's close, May 2.94⅛@2.94⅜. Corn was ⅛ lower to 1⅛ higher, May 2.51⅛@2.51½. Oats were ¼ lower to 1¼ higher, May 1.17¼@1.17½, and soybeans were 3 to 3 cents higher, March 3.97.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Cotton futures registered gains of 95 cents to $1.65 a bale in moderately active dealings today. Mill operations, prior to the year-end, supported the nearby deliveries. Commission houses and New Orleans demand was attracted to new crop positions on expectations of a sizable advance in the mid-December cotton parity price which was confirmed in the parity announcement after the close of trading. Hedge selling and scattered profit taking were readily absorbed.

Inventory Piling Cited by Nathan

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Economist Robert Nathan said today predictions by many economists of a recession in 1947 were wrong as to timing but will come true before many months unless positive and prompt action is taken to remedy what he called an unsound economic situation.

Nathan, former chairman of the War Production Board planning committee and later deputy war mobilizer, said one of the big factors in making 1947 a boom year was an extremely heavy accumulation of inventories in the latter months of the year.

The 39-year-old economist, author of the controversial wage-profit survey for the CIO one year ago, said inventory accumulations are bound to slow down before long. He added that the Marshall Plan at best will merely maintain the current export level.

Nathan spoke at a luncheon given by the Lewis Steiger Co. at which the company announced a reduction of nearly 15 per cent on British-made hose it distributes.

Local Utility Stocks Sink To '47 Lows

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington utility stocks yesterday sank to new low levels for the year and longer.

Twenty shares of Washington Gas Light Co. common changed hands at 20, off ½ from the previous close. Yesterday's price compared with a high of 27 for the year.

One hundred shares of Capital Transit Co. were sold at 12⅞, off ⅛ from the previous close. High for the year was 29.

Eight hundred shares of Potomac Electric Power Co. common sold for 12¾, off ¼ from the previous close. This new issue, recently listed on the Washington Stock Exchange, had sold as high as 15⅛.

At their current levels, the utility issues showed high dividend yields. Capital Transit Co., which is on a $2 annual dividend basis, returns about 15 per cent. The company, however, stated frankly that the last quarterly dividend was out of earned surplus, not earnings. A deficit of $83,295 was reported for the first 11 months this year. How long this dividend will be maintained is debatable.

Washington Gas Light Co. common, which pays a $1.50 annual dividend, shows a dividend yield of 7½ per cent at yesterday's price. Net earnings have held up reasonably well this year with $705,798 netted in comparison with $797,518 in the first 11 months last year. Consolidated net even showed a gain. The gas company is in the midst of offering an additional 85,000 shares of common stock. On the basis of this year's earnings so far, the reason for the slump in its stock is not clear.

Potomac Electric Power Co. common, which is on a 90-cent annual dividend basis, shows a current dividend yield of slightly more than 7 per cent. Pepco's earnings have dropped about 15 per cent in the first 11 months, but dividend requirements still are covered. The stock price slump is attributed mainly to the fact that Pepco's principal stockholder, North American Co., recently distributed most of its Pepco holdings to its stockholders in the form of a dividend. Some of the new holders, it is believed, have been liquidating and creating steady pressure.

DIVIDEND RECORD: A local dividend record with few equals was continued yesterday when Terminal Refrigerating & Warehousing Corp. declared its 144th consecutive semi-annual dividend of $1.50 a share on common stock. The dividend is payable December 31 to stock of record December 26. The corporation is the successor to and owner of the Washington Market Co. which was established on May 29, 1870. Executive offices are at 4th and D sts. sw.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Charles R. Hook, jr., will become vice president, personnel, of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway on January 1, succeeding John B. Parrish of Richmond, Va., who is retiring after 48 years service . . . Columbia Records, Inc., announced that Edward Wallerstein, president, will become chairman of board and will be succeeded as president by Frank K. White, now vice president and treasurer of Columbia Broadcasting System . . . Paul. W. Litchfield, chairman of board of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., will be given the 1948 Public Relations Award of the Public Relations Counsel, Inc., for the greatest contribution to the national welfare through public relations.

F. K. White

GAS OFFERING: Formal offering of $5,000 additional shares of common stock is being made by Washington Gas Light Co. at $20 a share. Stockholders of record December 26 received warrants to buy the new shares at the rate of one for each five old shares. The "rights" will expire January 13. Local brokers reported considerable interest in the "rights" but no actual trade. Nominal market was reported as 2 cents bid and 5 cents asked. A group of 10 local investment houses has agreed to act as dealer-managers in soliciting stockholders subscriptions for the offering. They are The First Boston Corp; Alex. Brown & Sons; Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath; Johnston, Lemon & Co.; Folger, Nolan, Inc.; Goodwyn & Olds; Mackall & Coe; Ferris & Co.; Robinson, Rohrbaugh & Lukens, and Robert C. Jones & Co.

EARNINGS: Glidden Co. and subsidiaries reported net income of $13,737,984 in fiscal year ended October 31, equal to $7.57 a share, after a stock split of two for one, compared with $5,713,015 or $2.95 a share in previous 12 months. Other income reports yesterday included:

WHAT TO EXPECT: Higher dollar sales but little increase in the physical volume of shipments and production in 1948 are forecast in a National Industrial Conference Board survey of business executives. The report, released yesterday, said slightly more than 60 per cent of executives queried expected increases in sales volume in the first half of the year, nearly 22 per cent see little or no change ahead, and slightly less than 17 per cent expect a decrease in sales volume.

Mild Support Cuts Losses In Stock List

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Attempts to get the stock market back on the recovery track failed in the majority of cases today although assorted favorites put up a fair show of resistance.

There was considerable tax selling for cash—these transactions were concluded on a regular basis Saturday—but offerings of this sort were not oppressive. A little short covering by professionals and other buying was predicated on the hope that the December rally would be resumed in January.

The direction generally was downward from the start with activity picking up at intervals. Mild support arrived in the final hour and extreme losses running to a point or more were reduced in most cases at the close. Transfers of 1,900,000 shares compared with 930,000 Friday.

Joynt Leaving VA To Aid Corporate Control Program

John B. Joynt, director of organization and methods for the Veterans' Administration, will leave the Federal Service soon after the first of the year to set up a management control program for the North American Rayon Corporation and the American Bemberg Corporation, both in New York City.

Joynt

While still on active duty in the Army, Lieutenant Colonel Joynt was brought into the Veterans' Administration by Gen. Omar N. Bradley to assist him in planning the reorganization of that agency.

During the war, Colonel Joynt served as a management control officer under Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, wartime chief of the Army Service Forces.

Record Power Demand Is Met

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Nation's electric power companies squeezed through the greatest demand in their history this month with an average 5 per cent margin of reserve and curtailment of service to "only a handful of the 37 million customers," the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

A Nation-wide poll over the weekend showed that the aggregate peak demand was for 49,500,000 kilowatts. This compared with 45 million kilowatts in December, 1946, when the margin of reserve was 12 per cent.

Curtailment of service aggregated 48,500 kilowatts, the institute said, but an additional 98,000 kilowatts of interruptible power were cut off during the time of peak demand in accord with contract provisions, "a normal procedure for any year for such customers."

Business Outlook

Economists Find Job Offers Fewer Than Usual at Parley

By J. A. Livingston

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—Here at the Sheraton Hotel, American economists are holding forth at their annual between-Christmas-and-New Year's meetings. It's strictly a professional—a scholarly—affair, at least that part of it that meets the public eye.

Professors from California, Duke and Wisconsin; research analysts from the Brookings Institution, Committee for Economic Development, and the Twentieth Century Fund; economists from General Motors and Sun Oil; representatives of Federal agencies, State governments, and financial institutions discuss a range of topics which throws the layman for a loop: "The Economic Theory of Imperfect Competition, Oligopoly, and Monopoly" or "A Consideration of the Economic and Monetary Theories of J. M. Keynes" or "Stochastic Aspects of the Aggregation Problem."

Livingston

Yet all is not on such a high plane. While the learned sessions go on, there's an unremitting buzz-buzz-buzz in the halls and parlors outside. That's where another kind of business goes on. Smith wants to see the head of the business school at Michigan or Minnesota. Maybe a job's open, or Jones would like to get a bid from Yale, or Johns Hopkins or Indiana. He doesn't want to leave Siwash, but an offer might help him to that long-sought associate professorship, and if not that, maybe it would net him the cost-of-living salary increase Mrs. Jones has been agitating for.

THE YOUNGER economist makes the rounds of his college mates. He says hello to former professors, and informs Dr. Soandso that his paper on "Savings and Investment" in a recent economic review enlarged his horizon. Such goings-on, of course, are conducted in an academic calm. Nothing obtrusive, mind you. Yet by any other name it's apple polishing—with a high polish.

And then there's the chap who attends the meeting just to be seen. He shakes hands with Joseph Schampeter, author of the world-famous "Business Cycles" and newly named president of the association; Refus Tucker of General Motors, C. Canby Balderson, dean of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania; E. A. Goldenweiser of the Institute of Advanced Study, Princeton; Dr. Wesley Clair Mitchell, winner of the association's Walker Medal for making a major contribution to American economic thought; or Paul H. Douglas of the University of Chicago, retiring president of the association. The purpose of his hand-shaking is simple. People might get the bright idea that "Farquhar must take his economics seriously. Have to bear him in mind."

Best form of advertising is to give papers. That gets your name in the program. And you can always be sure that a few diehards will show up to hear you. No one has ever started speaking at an AEA session to an empty room. And sometimes a session will be jampacked—like the one at which John H. Williams of Harvard held forth. Naturally, you'd not expect such a turnout for yourself. Williams has a national reputation; is known as a trenchant, stimulating scholar.

BUSIEST PERSONS are the heads of schools or department on the prowl for personnel. They go around and ask leading questions: "How are you getting along? Like it where you are?" The answer is invariably the same: "I find my work extremely interesting." It's the tone, the inflection, that counts. At the slightest hint of unenthusiasm, the prowler sets forth the advantages of the climate at Palo Alto, the building program contemplated at Pennsylvania, or the opportunities of earning extra income out of the paid Government assignments in Washington, D. C.

The job market this year lacked its usual briskness, and many members of the AEA are burned up about it. Ordinarily, the AEA and the American Statistical Association hold sessions at the same time and place. This year the AEA chose Chicago. When the ASA learned about it, it was too late to obtain hotel accommodations. Result: The ASA went to New York. Further result: Fewer offers of and bids for jobs. One member sarcastically commented: "Here the U. S. is trying to get together with Russia and we, social scientists and supposedly planners and thinkers, can't get together with one another."

All the while the formal business goes on in the meeting rooms. Papers are read. Men and women look into this meeting, then that, and when you miss a session, you feel like you did in college when you cut a class. You remark to a friend: "Sorry I couldn't make 'Fiscal Policy in Prosperity and Depression.' Guess I'll read it when it comes out in the report on the proceedings." The friend nods. He knows and you know he knows that you'll probably not get around to it. That, however, is strictly a professional trade secret. The amenities must be preserved. After all, these are scholarly, unmaterialistic meetings. You come, ostensibly, to learn—not to meet people, be seen, heard or make a better connection.

Kiddies Please 'Mama'

Charlotte Likes Teen-Age Fans

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE ABOUT THE TOWN: Charlotte Greenwood, Lottie to her old friends, takes pride in the nickname her National company of "I Remember Mama" has given her . . . Everybody always calls her "Mama." . . . Despite her long reputation as a gangling comedienne (she went on the stage at 18 in "The White Cat"), Mama's both younger and shorter than you expect—she's only 5-feet-9 . . . Like this reporter, she's an admirer of the writing skill John Van Druten has put into his play . . . "My favorite scene," she says, "is in the soda parlor, one of the two times Mama gives way to her inner feelings. She tells Katrin of the baby brother who died in Norway. Van Druten's words for this scene are so right that I go over the script every night just to make sure I don't put in any extra ands, buts or ifs." . . . Offstage she's Mrs. Martin Broones and this week the Broones celebrated their twenty-third wedding anniversary (another of those successful Hollywood marriages you seldom read about) . . . They celebrated together, Broones coming on from the Coast where he's been back at his first theater love—writing and composing— . . . Broones once was Metro's music executive—and before that did the scores of Hassard Short's and Refus Lemaire's revues . . . Lottie is surprised and delighted to find that those Sunday afternoon radio plays she did for several years have won her a generation of fans which never heard of all those "Letty" shows . . . She expects her callers to be the ones with longer memories and says it's refreshing to find teen-agers at her happy play . . . The Broones are sorry to be missing their Hollywood neighbors, Corinne Griffith and George Marshall, who're out of town . . . But before they left, Corinne fixed up the Broones with a Statler suite complete with Christmas fixings . . . Lottie makes no dates for Mondays . . . "That's wash day," she smiles. "There's a lot of me to wash. Mama's hair must be Scandinavian, and who ever heard of a dirty Norwegian?"

LEE HOLLAND, formerly of the Civic Theater, rushing through town to New York to put "Dr. Social" into rehearsal . . . Lee's last production was the ill-fated King David play for James Mason. . . . This one will costar Dean Jaggers and Virginia Gillmore and plans are afoot for a Baltimore tryout.

RICHARD SKINNER, another Civic Theater alumnus, reminds us that summer is coming . . . Dick is joining the Olney Theater as general manager and coproducer with Redge Allen and Elevlyn Freyman . . . The Olney has set its opening for May 28 and will run for 15 weeks . . . Skinner's spent the past four summers in the same capacity at Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa. . . . His four Broadway productions include "Family Portrait," in which Judith Anderson played the Mother of Jesus, and "Charley's Aunt," wherein Jose Ferrer was so hilarious.

JOE YULE, in case it's slipped your mind, makes it Mickey Rooney Week in town . . . Joe is playing the cabbage-loving "Bringing Up Father" at the Pix and is the father of the Capitol's star . . . Mickey felt bad about canceling his last show Christmas Day, but the little guy really was sick . . . Now he's off for a stay at London's Palladium.

BORIS TAMURIM, who played the man in King-Smith's "No Exit" last fall, is tasting New York success . . . He directed "Lamp at Midnight," the New Stages play about Galileo, which got an enviable welcome from the Times' Brooks Atkinson and the Herald Tribune's Joe Pihodna . . . The New Stages headquarters at 159 Bleecker st., N. Y. 12, and will be on through January 17 . . . Washington's Dorothy Croissant is rejoicing in this success, too . . . As we told you the other day, Dorothy did the costumes.

LEO G. CARROLL bound for Florida's Rollins College, where he'll play his old role of Inspector Rough in "Angel Street" at the Annie Russell Memorial Theater January 8 through 12 . . . Carroll's last play, "The Druid Circle" by John Van Druten, had what seems to have been an untimely New York death . . . After the Rollins play, Carroll goes back to New York for the Theater Guild revival of Shaw's "You Never Can Tell."

JOHN BOLES, a busy visitor, covering the town with the missus . . . The Capitol's headliner and that ad's "Man of Distinction," commuting between F st. and the Shoreham with many a wayside stop . . . He's not doing "Waiting at the Gate for Katie" this visit, which might be classified as news . . . When last seen he was trying to catch up with Bill Henry of CBS, an old Coast pal.

A SHADE OF LILLIAN RUSSELL: Andrea King, with Pierre Andre and Igor Dega, as the sweetheart of the '90s, one of the leading characters of "My Wild Irish Rose," which arrives at the Warner Thursday. The Technicolor musical is a biography of Chauncey Olcott, with Dennis Morgan playing the Irish singer

Court-Martial Gets Charges In Check Case

Camp Lee, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—After presenting a case built almost entirely on documents, the prosecution rested today in the general court-martial of Capt. Edward P. Kelly who faces 25 charges filed after he walked off the post here December 1 with pay checks of 37 fellow Army officers.

The charges include two counts of embezzlement and two of forgery, six counts of signing checks without a bank account, and 15 counts of being absent without leave.

In a statement, signed by the 40-year-old Denville, N. J. man, and given to Rubin Van Alst, jr., United States Secret Service agent, Kelly told how he left the post after he had been chosen by fellow officers to pick up their pay checks.

Kelly's Statement

Fed up with Army life and faced with an unpaid loan from a bank, Kelly said he caught a bus into nearby Richmond, bought civilian clothes, and loafed around, seeing a movie and drinking beer.

Meanwhile, he said, he had forged signatures to two of the checks.

After staying in the State Capital briefly, he caught a train for Miami only a few moments after he put the rest of the checks in an envelope and mailed them to Camp Lee. Kelly said he stayed in Florida several days, drinking, going to picture shows and loafing, during which time he was robbed of $1000. All he had left, he said, was one dime and a train ticket to New York.

Took Train to N. Y.

Kelly said he took the train for New York, where he pawned his watch and ring and spent his time in movies until he decided to surrender to military authorities.

After the officer walked into a military police station in New York, he was taken to Fort Jay, N. J., then to Valley Forge General Hospital and finally to Camp Lee.

As his trial got underway—just one day before he was scheduled for release from the service—the courtroom was filled with spectators. Kelly's wife, however, sat calmly in a corridor.

Spurned Girl, Lover Charged On Her Confession in Theft

Providence, R. I., Dec. 29 (U.P.)—A Cranston lawyer's 19-year-old daughter and the man who scorned her after she allegedly stole $13,000 to win his love were held in $17,000 total bail today on charges of violating the National Stolen Property Act.

Miss Claire M. Griffin, a graduate of St. Xavier Academy, and Edward Masterson, 29, of Pawtucket, a former convict, allegedly fled to Chicago with the money.

Miss Griffin, who confessed the crime to Chicago police to get even with Masterson, furnished $2000 bail. She smiled grimly when Masterson's bail of $15,000 was imposed. In requesting the higher bail, Assistant United States Attorney Joseph Vaneziale said:

"She was a victim of this man Masterson. She loved him and was under his influence."

An audit of the books of the General Market Co., where Miss Griffin was employed, placed the larceny at $8061. However, the girl contended the amount was $13,000.

Miss Griffin, who fled the State with Masterson September 14, told Chicago police her companion deserted her, and with $4000 of the stolen cash, wooed and married red-haired Bernice Branfalt, 26, a Chicago cafe singer. Miss Griffin said she got only $2 of the entire amount.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—G. Tyler Miller, State superintendent of public instruction, said today his advisory council of school superintendents from the nine geographic areas of Virginia and the chairman of the State boar dof education will meet at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

He said that among the things to be considered at the meeting would be legislation which is expected to come before the General Assembly relating to school matters.

The council was set up more than a year ago to serve as an advisory body to the State superintendents of public instruction and to help bring about closer working relationships between the department of education and local school divisions.

Tatum Won't Go to Navy; Rams Get Shaughnessy

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE batting figures for 1947 indicate rather clearly that the Boudreau Shift was not the key to stopping Ted Williams' hitting habits. Williams' answer to the Boudreau Shift was his third league batting championship in six years.

POVICH

It was a modest sort of .343 figure with which Williams topped the American League hitters, but only 13 points off his league-leading average of 1942 when the Boudreau Shift was not even a gleam in the eye of Cleveland Manager Lou Boudreau.

Boudreau's lop-sided defensive setup against Williams that virtually gave the right fielder four assistants whenever Ted waggled his bat, did have certain effects, however. It probably prevented Williams from hitting at least .390. He lost a mess of hits to the unorthodox defense.

But the fact that Williams could still lead the league in hitting in a year when the special defense was used against him is certainly a tribute to the fellow's skill with a bat. Opposing clubs were never driven to such desperate measures by Babe Ruth or Ty Cobb or any of the other batting greats before Williams.

IF HE NEVER gets another hit, Williams must go down as one of the great hitters of baseball history. In six tries at the league title, he is batting .500 with his three championships. His sensational .406 figure in 1941 was the first time in 18 years that an American Leaguer had batted more than .400. No man has come close to it since.

The baseball writers who voted Joe DiMaggio the most valuable player of 1947 over Williams misused their ballot. They could have consulted the league's pitchers and learned that Williams was by far the most-feared hitter in the league. He came within six walks of tying the bases-on-balls-record held by Babe Ruth, and formerly thought unassailable.

Williams outhit DiMaggio by 28 points, hit 12 more home runs, nine more doubles and batted in more runs. He was on base oftener, and scored more runs. His nearest challenger for the batting title was Barney McCoskey, whom he outhit by 15 points. Last season was the second in which he won the triple crown for high average, home runs and runs batted in honors.

VERNON STEPHENS' final average for 1947 was a modest .279 with the St. Louis Browns, but at baseball's current inflated prices the Red Sox paid $200,000 for him in November. Twenty years ago, a .279 hitter wouldn't fetch over the waiver price of $7500, but money is an easy commodity with the well-heeled modern clubs, most of which are owned by millionaires.

The Red Sox had a special reason, however, for going high for Stephens. He is the type of right-handed hitter who figures to beat a tattoo against Boston's convenient left-field fence. And his lifetime average in Fenway Park has been .327. Anyway, the Red Sox were desperate for an infielder.

One interesting story told by the figures concerns George Kell and Barney McCoskey, the two players who figured in an even swap by the Athletics and Tigers in 1946. They both ended up with identical averages of .317 in their first season with their new clubs and last year they were both among the leading five again, with Kell hitting .320 and McCoskey .328.

THE BIGGEST DROP was taken by Mickey Vernon of the Nats who, a year ago, was sporting the American League batting championship with an average of .353. He nose-dived 88 points to a .265 figure and was one of the reasons the Nats were buried in seventh place. Vernon was in a slump from the day the season opened and his worrisome nature was no help to his efforts to shake it.

Washington stacked up poorly all down the line in a hitting way. Stan Spence was their top regular, and he achieved only a modest .279 figure. Buddy Lewis, rated as a consistent .300 hitter, wound up with .261, and nobody in the Washington infield hit as much as .250 with the exception of Vernon.

For the Nats, however, there was one bright development. Young Gil Coan, after he was brought up from Chattanooga, got into 11 games, went to bat 42 times and made 21 hits for an even .500 average. Even if Coan slumps 200 points next season, he'll be a valuable addition to the Washington lineup.

"Iceman" Throws A Return Block

Everett, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—A 16-year-old member of the Everett High School football squad doesn't think "snowmen" are very "soft."

Bruce McLea, Everett High junior, built the snowman and then decided to have a little football practice.

Unaware that the snowman had become an "iceman" overnight, he threw a hard block at it.

Terps' Coach Calls Story 'Fantastic'

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 29—"Somebody is just daydreaming," Maryland Coach Jim Tatum said today as he commented on a rumor that he was the No. 1 choice to succeed Tom Hamilton as Navy football coach, if the Middies decide to engage a civilian mentor.

"I don't know a thing about it, honestly, and I think it's unfair to Hamilton that stories like this are printed. It's a fantastic story."

In Annapolis, according to the Associated Press, Captain E. B. (Whitey) Taylor, academy athletic director, said any guesses about Navy's football coaching setup next year are premature.

Sources Not Disclosed

Tatum's and Taylor's comments followed the publishing of a story by Bernard Kahn, sports editor of the Daytona Beach (Fla.) News Journal, in which he revived conjecture about the Navy coaching berth for 1948.

He did not disclose his sources, but Kahn said that after Tatum, the Navy prefers Dr. Jock Sutherland, coach of the professional Pittsburgh Steelers.

Captain Taylor, at Annapolis, said the rumor was a "surprise to me."

"At the present time no decision has been made as to the coaching situation for next year. And we don't know that any changes are contemplated."

One Year to Go

Capt. Tom Hamilton has just completed his second year as football coach and, under the graduate system followed at Annapolis for 20 years, has another season to go.

The system itself has come in for sniping recently, topped off by Admiral Jonas Ingram's assertion that "it has not worked out." Ingram inaugurated the policy of assigning Navy football experts to the academy as head coach for three years, then returning them to sea duty.

Now commissioner of the All-America Conference, Ingram was director of athletics at Annapolis in the late twenties.

"Tom Hamilton is a fine coach, but the schedules have been killing," he observed last month. "He should be retired so that he may be at Annapolis permanently."

Taylor reaffirmed today that under the present system Hamilton has one "and possibly two" more years here.

The only top-drawer post that will be open is Taylor's. The athletic director serves according to a similar procedure, and while Taylor has been here only two years, he will have had three years ashore next June.

Lions' Sale Talk Snags

Detroit, Dec. 29 (AP).—Negotiations for the sale of the Detroit Lions of the National Football League broke up this afternoon with both parties agreeing they were "too far apart" on the price of the franchise.

Owner Fred Mandel, jr., following an hour's conference with a seevn-man syndicate interested in purchasing the Lions, declared, "We are so far apart on the price that there is no use of talking."

Mandel left the conference with National League Commissioner Bert Bell, who had come to Detroit earlier today to confer on a possible sale of the football team.

Lyle Fife, an electrical supply firm owner and spokesman for the syndicate which has already incorporated as the Detroit Football Co., agreed with Mandel. "Apparently we are too far apart in our thinking to consumate any deal."

Asked if any further negotiations would be made, Fife replied that it would be "entirely up to Mandel" to reopen any talks.

He said the football company had made its "final offer" and that there would be "no bargaining."

Moylan and Brink Win In Australian Tennis

Adelaide, Australia, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Two Americans, Ed Moylan of Trenton, N. J., and big Jim Brink of Seattle, Wash., scored easy victories today in the South Australian championship singles matches.

Moylan breezed by J. C. Clements of Australia, 6-0, 6-1, 6-1, and Brink had an even easier time toppling J. H. Hann of Australia, 6-0, 6-0, 6-1.

Trippi Says His Baseball Days Are Over

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—Professional baseball generally and the Atlanta Crackers particularly can forget all about Charles Lou Trippi, who once thought he could make a living bouncing from the diamond to the gridiron and back again.

"This is the game for me," cracked the former Georgia All-America halfback after he paced the Chicago Cardinals to a 28-21 triumph over the Philadelphia Eagles for the National Football League title at Comiskey Park yesterday.

Trippi, ever since he closed the baseball season batting .334 as an Atlanta outfielder in the Southern Association, complained that baseball and football don't mix—especially for a $100,000 halfback who is expected to be something of a padded ballerina on touchdown-bound legs.

He's certain now—after his two spectacular touchdown runs against the Eagles—that he'll stick to his plan to by-pass baseball. The Crackers have offered him a salary raise and a fat bonus, but Trippi says "I don't think I'll change my mind."

Trippi, wearing gym shoes for the first time on the gridiron, scampered over frozen Comiskey Park 44 yards or a touchdown on a quick-opening play and ran 75 yards for another with a punt.

Al Salkowski Wins for Terps In Sugar Bowl

New Orleans, La., Dec. 29.—In a free-swinging opening bout, Al Salkawski of Maryland held safe a substantial first-round lead to score a unanimous decision over Ernie Charboneau of Michigan State. After taking Charboneau's sharp lefts for the first few seconds, Salkowski cut loose with fusilade of powerful right hand blows to the face to win the round clearly.

The comparatively quiet second and furious but weary third were just about even. Salkowski's first-heat barrage was enough to get him the nod.

National Intercollegiate Champion Charlie Davey gave Michigan State its first point by stopping Maryland's Danny Smith in 46 seconds of the second round. Swift left hooks to the face and body softened Smith up for a booming right cross that sent him to the canvas for a six-count in the first. The Terrapin answered the bell in good shape but another barrage brought blood to his nose and staggered him. The referee stopped it.

Scores Knockdowns

Dropping opponent Henry Caparo twice in the first chapter, Andy Quattrocchi of Maryland finished it off in one minute, 9 seconds of the second round to take the 130-pound trophy.

Caparo sank under a flurry of rights and lefts and the referee intervened.

Jack Tierney of Michigan State and Rowland Hyde of Maryland put on a rip-roaring draw in the 145-pound category that had the fans on their feet almost from the opening shot. Science went aglimmering as both boys pulled them up from the floor and the crowd loved it. Hyde's strong finish got him the referee's verdict but two judges called it a draw.

Old Princeton's Future Bright, Says Dick West

Dick West, captain of Princeton's football team the past season, turned after-luncheon speaker yesterday and did all right.

Dick was guest of honor at a Princeton Alumni Club party at the Willard Hotel and he brought with him words of good cheer for the Old Grads about the 1948 Tiger team.

"Princeton has reason to be optimistic about next fall," he said, "despite the loss of 15 lettermen from this year's team.

"Our freshman team was unbeaten in 1947. On that team were 19 boys who captained prep school teams before they came to Princeton."

Listening to Dick's remarks was his own kid brother, Donald G. West, who quarterbacked Princeton's junior varsity last season. Donald may step into Dick's old backfield spot, come September.

Dick's dad, Martin R. West, also was on hand as was his older brother, Martin, jr., Princeton, '43.

Dick won the Johnny Poe Trophy, Princeton's top football honor. He is a former Episcopal High of Alexandria star, and the first Washington man to captain a Princeton team since 1893 when Phil King led the Tigers.

Judge J. E. Murdock, president of the club, remarked that Dick was a "59-minute man" for Princeton last season, and added:

"He's soon to become a papa (in a few weeks) and we want him to be a 60-minute man so we're presenting him with an electric alarm clock."

No Trippi . . .

Butts Feels Lonely Minus Any Big Star

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 29.—When Wally Butts sends his Georgia Bulldogs against Maryland in Thursday's Gator Bowl game it will mark the fifth time he's taken his Cracker gridmen into a post-season affair in nine years, but it's the first time he'll be without either a Charlie Trippi or a Frank Sinkwich for a New Year's Day skirmish.

"And it's a mighty lonesome feeling," the little fellow with the big drawl said today shortly after he and his Bulldogs arrived. "It's like a man going on a honeymoon without his wife."

Georgia's "little round man," who graduated from the pessimistic, moaning school of coaches with a magna cum laude degree, lost no time in contributing his daily piece of gloom.

He couldn't understand why his team was a seven-point favorite. "They'll beat us two or three touchdowns," he sighed in a serious attempt to reform the nonbelievers who merely chuckled when he said it. "Red Sanders (Vanderbilt head coach) told me Maryland had the finest line he's team played against all year. They're bigger than we are and I'm afraid they'll run all over our boys."

UNLIKE Mr. Split T Tatum, who had his Terrapins going through another hush-hush practice at the Naval Air Station, Mr. Butts opened the gates at the Jacksonville baseball park and allowed everyone to watch his Bulldogs drill.

"Shucks, we don't have anything to hide. We can't fool anybody and I don't care who watches our practices."

The Bulldogs didn't even don football uniforms today. They practiced for two hours in sweat clothes. Quarterback Johnny Rauch, their ace passer, was the whole show, whipping long aerials to his favorite catcher, End Dan Edwards, who was hauling 'em in a la Joe DiMaggio. They constitute Georgia's one-two-punch. Butts, a pass master, made no attempt to conceal his strategy.

"THAT'S WHAT they're going to be doing out there Thursday, so we may as well let them practice it today," he said.

The Terrapins looked lean, hungry and ready and were sorry when quitting time came.

The versity backfield of Vic Turyn, Lu Gambino, Jim LaRue and Harry Bonk ripped through a defensive arrangement patterned after Georgia's.

Gambino was really driving and running, both inside and outside. The big Gam from Baltimore had been shifted to safety man for the clash as Tatum wants to take advantage of his tremendous speed on punt returns.

Espey After Yankee Job

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—General Manager Jack Espey of the Baltimore Colts today confirmed reports that he is negotiating for a job with the New York Yankees of the All-America Football Conference, and Owner Bob Rodenberg said the proposed shift has his approval.

"I have talked to an official of the New York club on uch a possibility," said Espey. "I do not know what type of job the Yankees may have in mind for me, but if Topping (Owner Dan Topping) wants to see me about a position, I certainly am going to talk to him."

Baltimore is reported to have lost $150,000 during 1947, its first season in the AAC and Rodenberg ha made it known that any curtailment of expenses would primarily affec tthe front office.

The Colts won two games lost 11 and tied one last season.

Former Skin Coach Will Work on 'T'

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

After four years on the Washington Redskins' coaching staff, Clark Shaughnessy yesterday found a new field for his talent when President Dan Reeves of the Los Angeles Rams announced the signing of Shaughnessy as advisory coach to Head Coach Bob Snyder.

Shaughnessy ostensibly was hired to install his version of the T-formation with the Rams, whose own T-formation last season accounted for only six victories in 12 games.

On the local front, Redskin General Manager Dick McCann expressed pleasure with Shaughnessy's new assignment.

A Good Job for Redskins

"His contract with the Redskins," McCann said, "was to give us a working T-formation. We feel that he did an excellent job."

Shaughnessy's acceptance of the new post, after looking over several offers on the West Coast, confirms The Washington Post's report early in the season that 1947 would be the veteran coach's last year with Washington.

An Associated Press dispatch from Los Angeles quoted Shaughnessy as elated with his new job.

"I believe there is a great future in professional football in Los Angeles," he said.

'For More Than One Year'

Reeves did not disclose salary figures but said Shaughnessy's contract was "for more than one year."

In joining the Rams, Shaughnessy renews association with Snyder and his aides, Joe Stydahar and George Trafton, all of whom played or helped coach in Chicago in the coaching of the Chicago Bears when Shaughnessy was advisory coach in Chicago from 1936 to 1940.

Shaughnessy is one of the most traveled coach in the business. After guiding Tulane, Loyola of New Orleans and Chicago University, Shaughnessy went west and scored brilliantly at Stanford. ngagements followed at Maryland and Pittsburgh, during which time he served in an advisory capacity with the Redskins.

Lucky Number Proves Unlucky To Uline Arena

Washington Sportservice, Inc., and Uline Arena will play a belated Santa Claus to some 40 basketball fans who simultaneously hit the "lucky number" of 343999 in the basketball program at Uline's last Saturday night as the Washington Capitols opposed the Philadelphia Warriors.

It was announced last night that the machine had jammed in publishing the rotating number on the program, so it was decided to award two tax-paid tickets to each of the fans who reported the number Saturday night.

The excitement developed between the first and second periods of the game when Bill Brundige, manning the public address system, announced 343999 as the winner, and advised the holder of the lucky number to report immediately to claim the prize.

A spontaneous roar greeted announcement of the number, and Referee in Chief Pat Kennedy was forced to halt the game temporarily early in the second period as some 40 fans stormed across the floor.

Grid Contest Whiz On Two Shows

Trygve Tuve, 15-year-old boy who twice won The Washington Post's Pick-The-Winner football contest, will have two new experiences tonight.

He will appear on radio and television programs.

At 6:15 o'clock, Tuve will be on Bob Wolff's radio program over station WINX, and at 8 o'clock he will try his hand at television on Dumont's WTTG telecast.

NBA Rates Walcott First in Line for Louis' Crown

Maxim, Ray Tandberg Get Mention

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Sports Writer

The National Boxing Association, after a 21-month heavyweight hunt, finally has found a logical contender for the title owned by Joe Louis.

The NBA quarterly ratings came out last night and to the surprise of practically no one, Jersey Joe Walcott was right behind the champ.

Anyone who doesn't know why Walcott was promoted from the honorable mention to the logical contender class also would flunk out on one question:

"Where were you on the night of December 5?"

For that was the night Walcott knocked Louis kicking twice, but lost a split decision.

Conn Was Last

The last time the NBA had a logical heavyweight contender was in March, 1946. His name was Billy Conn. Remember?

Oddly, it was along about this time that the NBA first came out with a release praising Jersey Joe, who had just licked Jimmy Bivins and Joe Baksi. "A meteoric rise," said the NBA, getting a two-year head start on most boxing fans.

Four heavyweights—Olle Tandberg, Elmer Ray, Baksi and Joe Maxim—got honorable mention in tonight's list.

Fred J. Saddy, chairman of the rating committee, reported slim pickings among the welterweights.

No logical contenders are listed here, said Saddy, because no one has been able to demonstrate that he's in the same class—and therefore should be in the same ring—wtih Sugar Ray Robinson.

The ratings:

HEAVYWEIGHT — Champion, Joe Louis, Michigan. Logical contender, Joe Walcott, New Jersey. Outstanding boxers, Olle Tandberg, Sweden; Elmer Ray, Florida; Joe Baksi, Pennsylvania; Joe Maxim, Ohio.

LIGHT-HEAVYWEIGHT — Champion, Gus Lesnevich, New Jersey. Logical contenders, Ezzard Charles, Ohio; Archie Moore, Missouri; Billy Fox, Pennsylvania. Outstanding boxers, Bob Fawrth, Illinois; Bobby Zander, California; Lloyd Marshall, California; Freddie Mills, England.

MIDDLEWEIGHT—Champion, Rocky Graziano, New York. Logical contenders, Marcel Cerdan, France; Tony Zale, Indiana; Tommy Yargas, Pennsylvania; Jake Lamotta, New Yrk. Outstanding boxers, Bert Lytell, California; Dave Sands, Australia; Fred Apostoli, California; Charles Burley, Pennsylvania; Steve Belloise, New York; Anton Raadik, Estonia.

WELTERWEIGHT—Champion, Ray Robinson, New York. Logical contender, none available. Outstanding boxers, Tony Janiro, Ohio; George Costner, Ohio; Tommy Bell, Ohio; Bernard Docusen, Louisiana; Frankie Fernandez, Hawaii; Johnny Greco, Canada; Busan Jack, Georgia.

LIGHTWEIGHT—Champion, Ike Williams, Pennsylvania. Logical contender, Enrique Bolanos, California; Gene Burton, New York; Bob Montgomery, Pennsylvania. Outstanding boxers, Freddie Dawson, Illinois; Rudy Crus, California; Jess Flores, California; Johnny Bratten, Illinois; Larry Claneros, California.

FEATHERWEIGHT—Champion, Willie Pep, Connecticut. Logical contenders, Charles Riley, Missouri; Humberto Sierra, Cuba; Jo Sandy Saddler, New York; Carlos Chaves, California. Outstanding boxers, Miguel Acevedo, Cuba; Jose (Baby) Gonzales, Mexico; Jock Leslie, Michigan; Charles (Cabey) Lewis, New York; Jimmy McAllister, Maryland.

BANTAMWEIGHT—Champion, Manuel Ortiz, California. Logical contenders, Peter Kane, England; Manny Ortega, Texas; Dave Young, Hawaii; Harold Dade, Illinois. Outstanding boxers, Tirso Del Rosario, Philippines; Luis Galvani, Cuba; Jorge Sanches, Cuba; Sammy Reynolds, England.

Dear Folks:

New Year's Day, universal birthday of the thoroughbreds, will be celebrated Thursday at Gulfstream with the running of the first 3-year-old stake of the year, the $7500 added Singing Tower Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth. Nominations which closed Christmas Day find 16 of the best members of the age bracket in the Greater Miami area among the lineup of probables, including Tight Squeeze, the Rarco Stable's stretch running winner of the recent Fountain of Youth Handicap. That race, at six furlongs, did not provide sufficient distance for some starters to get into top action, and the added route of the New Year's morning race promises to bring a sizzling natal day celebration for the colts and fillies reaching the Derby age of 3. The Wheatley Stable's Athlete, whipped but far from disgraced in the Fountain of Youth, is one who will relish the increased distance, as will Noble Hero, Allies' Pal, Fiery Sun, King Midas and other speedsters of the younger set. William Veeneman's Phar Mon, a disappointing favorite in the Christmas Day stake when he tried in the final strides to be nosed out by Tight Squeeze, needed that race after a lengthy layoff and should be benefitted considerably with the effort under his belt. Gulfstream, in cooperation with the Orange Bowl, will conduct racing in the morning hours New Year's Day, with the final post-time so arranged as to permit race-goers to reach the Bowl in time for the kickoff in the football classic. Post for the day will be 10 a. m.

Coss, Rogers Advance in Boys Division

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Second seeded Gilbert Bogley of Landon School, Washington, D. C., defeated his schoolmate, Jackie Yates, to advance to the quarter-finals of the National Junior Indoor Tennis Tournament today. Bogley's winning scores were 6—4, 4—6, 6—1.

Two other Washingtonians, Ted Rogers, also of Landon School, and Tim Coss, passed their third round tests in the Boys Division. Rogers defeated Barry Murtha of New York, 6—1, 6—2. Coss whipped Carl Bruhns of New York, 6—4, 6—0.

Tom Lewyn of Searsdale, N. Y., eighth seeded in the juniors' division, was upset by Richard Squires of Bronxville, N. Y., 6—4, 14—12, the first break in the seedings.

Tomorrow Squires will oppose Grant Golden of Chicago, fourth seeded, in a quarterfinal match. Golden eliminated James Sailer of Englewood, N. J., 6—2, 6—0.

Top seeded junion, Alex Hetzeck of Hamtramck, Mich., and third ranked Sidney Schwartz of Miami, Fla., also advanced.

Bogley and Yates, who have held the boys doubles championship of Washington for the past three years, passed their first and second round tests in the nationals. They beat Vernon and Richard Aldridge of New York, 6—2, 6—2, and James Sailer and James Hammerstein of Englewood, N. J., 6—2, 6—3.

In the boys national doubles tourney, Coss, who attends Sidwell Friends School in Washington, and Rogers, won by default from David Fromkin and Richard Steinfeld of New York. Harrison Straley of Washington, D. C., teamed with Peter Penick of Montclair, N. J., lost by default to Phil Mallon and William Shaw of New York.

Penn State Ponders How To Stop Doak

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 29 (AP).—Penn State Coach Bob Higgins' three-part Cotton Bowl headache—weather, water and Walker—is now just one big nuisance.

"The weather has been fine," he said. "The water is no problem. But Walker . . ."

Doak Walker, All-America in his sophomore year, is the main reason Higgins has termed the Southern Methodist Mustangs "the most explosive team" he has ever seen.

"Dutch Meyer (Texas Christian University coach) watched us work out one day and told me we had a fine ball club," Higgins said. "Then he told me I would have to find some way to stop Walker.

"How? Well he couldn't tell me."

Rose Bowl

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 29 (AP).—All-America Halfback Bob Chappuis apparently pulled a leg muscle today and left the field as Michigan worked out for its Rose Bowl game with Southern California.

Trainer Jim Hunt helped Chappuis off the field and after a hasty examination labelled it a "charley-horse," and said the team's star passer and tailback would be all right tomorrow.

Other observers, however, were not so optimistic. Chappuis was running at the time and had not been hit.

Sugar Bowl

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29 (AP).—Sugar Bowl sponsors were apprehensive today as rain began to fall. They were awaiting anxiously areport from the weather bureau on prospects for Thursday when Alabama and Texas clash in the post-season gridiron contest.

The bureau will announce its forecast tomorrow morning.

Rain, which had measured .16 of an inch here, was not widespread, being confined to the coast, and preliminary indications were that Thursday had an excellent chance of being a dry day.

East-West

San Francisco, Dec. 29 (AP).—Heavy practice was ended today as outstanding college stars representing the East and the West tapered off training for the annual shrine football game in Kezar Stadium New Year's Day for the benefit of crippled children.

Coaches Bernie Bierman, Andy Kerr and Howard Odell of the East squad agreed their players were in good mental and physical condition. Tony Minisi of Pennsylvania, who sprained an ankle in a scrimmage Saturday, is expected to be ready for action by Thursday.

Washington Victim Of Hockey Freak

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—American Hockey League officials said today the triple hat trick turned in by the Indianapolis Caps last night in their 11 to 4 conquest of Washington was a league record.

Eddie Bruneteah, Pat Lunch and Clifford Simpson each scored three goals—hockey's hat trick—in the fray.

Banner Court Season Looms For Well-Balanced St. John's

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

AFTER SEVERAL years of fielding the second, third and fourth best private high school basketball team in the Washington area, the St. John's Cadets promise to run away with top honors this season.

They stack up well in every department. They have height, speed, good ball-handlers, one of the city's most potent scoring threats in Jack George, lots of reserves, and a competent coach in Joe Gallagher, former George Washington University star.

Besides 6-foot, 1-inch George, the Cadets have back from last year 6-foot, 2-inch Tom Fannon, an aggressive man under the basket; 6-foot, 1-inch Red Weaver and 5-foot, 9-inch Al Martins, two of the District's cleverest playmakers, and Vince Durkin, up from the second team. In addition, there are promising newcomers Jimmy Joyce and Don Kokes.

The Cadets have been impressive in their first two starts this season with decisive victories over Priory and the St. John's alumni.

Little Priory, incidentally, has been the surprise of the year. Before losing to the Cadets, the Panthers rolled up five consecutive victories. They defeated St. John's de Matha of Hyattsville, Bell Vocational, Montgomery-Blair, Sherwood and Oxon Hill.

However, as usual, posing the most serious threat to St. John's Catholic High title hopes are Coach Joe Kozik's Gonzaga Purple Eagles. The Eagles have lost most of the first team that brought them the Catholic High runnerup position to St. John's last season.

The Hogan brothers, Johnny and Donnie, Don Hitselberger, Tom Deveau and Bud Nolan are back from last year's team. And the addition of sharpshooting John Larkins is expected to help. Larkins scored 10 points as Gonzaga won its opener from Sidwell Friends 46-28.

None of the three local representatives in the Interstate Athletic Conference seems to be an outstanding contender for the championship. Of the three, St. Albans which hasn't played yet this season, has the best chance to finish near the top. The Saints have in 6 foot, 3 inch Roger Kingsbury one of the best pivot shots in the area. Landon has lost both its games so far.

Surging Caps Play Twice During Week

The Washington Caps, victorious in six of their last seven starts and now only one-half game behind the runner-up Baltimore Bullets and two games removed from the Western Division leading Chicago Stags, invade Philadelphia Friday night to oppose the Warriors.

On Saturday night they return to Uline's against their two-time conqueror, the Western Division leading Boston Celtics.

The local pros lost their opening game to the Warriors in Philadelphia by a three point margin last season, but since have beaten them seven times in a row—five times last season, and twice this year.

The Celtics, most improved team in the circuit, are the only club yet to fall before the Caps. They whipped the locals here in early season and in Boston shortly afterward, and will be at full strength when they bid for their third in a row over Washington here Saturday.

Out Fishing . . .

By Jack Bell

While a few hardy Washington anglers break ice at Alan's Fresh on the upper Wicomico, and brave icy wind on the Severn at Herald Harbor to angle for yellow perch and pike, some fishermen will sailfish certificates in balmy Florida.

Spending the holiday at West Palm Beach, J. A. Staples, 1503 S. Thomas St., Arlington, Va., won recognition with his catch of a 6 ft. 4 inch sail weighing 36 pounds.

Included in the party were C. T. Kallina, 2920 P st. se., Washington, D. C. and Col. Harold Fowler of Palm Beach. Kallina boated a 20 lb. kingfish, and Colonel Fowler brought in a 25-lb. African pompano.

A familiar loafing and meeting spot for many local fishermen is being refurbished at Southport, N. C. Visiting sportsmen late this summer started a fund to rehabilitate the picturesque waterfront spot.

Bill Kesiah, popular scribe says about $200 was contributed and carpenters are now putting in new benches and chairs to accommodate the spring crop of whittlers.

Bill also reports that a trawler is being built close by, and whittlers will find plenty of material lying around to whittle on. "That is" he says "if they're not too derned lazy to walk over and pick it up."

Novel All-Star Eleven Has 90-Lb. Tackle

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

COACH JOE BRANZELL of the Georgetown Branch of the Boys Club of Washington has a novel idea in picking all-star football teams.

Since he has five teams at his club, ranging in weight from 50-156 pounds, he chooses an eleven made up of the best boy at each position regardless of size.

Thus, he has 80-pound guards and 90-pound tackles "playing" right alongside the bigger boys on the all-star team.

This year's team is captained by Bob McLindon, one of the finest athletes ever to perform at the boys' club. McLindon, regarded as one of the brainiest boys in the club, is a fine passer, excellent blocker and the cleverest play caller at Georgetown.

Bob is also the best young basketball prospect Branzell has seen in 10 years of coaching. And that isn't all. Bob won an academic scholarship to St. John's and has registered nothing but A's in his two years as a cadet.

Only two repeaters are on this year's team. One is Right End Joe Collins of the 140-pound team, who made last year's star team while playing 120-pound ball. The other is Left Halfback Dale Larsen, a 120-pounder, who made the grade in 1946 as a 105-pound player.

Two of last year's all-star selections made the grade as members of Washington high school teams this fall. Center Harvey Steele performed for the Western Red Raiders and Right Guard Dave Fiester played at Woodrow Wilson.

LE—Russell Barrett, 120 pounds.
LT—Jim Cacheris, 140 pounds.
LG—Ronny Hall, 90 pounds.
C—Don Scott, 140 pounds.
RG—Dick Keys, 80 pounds.
RT—Calvin Bryant, 90 pounds.
RE—Joe Collins, 140 pounds.
QB—Bob McLindon (Capt.), 105 pounds.
LH—Dale Larsen, 120 pounds.
RH—Mike Keane, 90 pounds.
FB—Charles Workman, 105 pounds.

THE MERRICK branch of the Boys Club has several big events coming up in the next few weeks. On January 9, the Merrick lads will box the Alexandria Boys Club in the Merrick gym. Thirteen bouts are on the program.

Then on January 14, all five Merrick football teams will be honored at a big banquet. All of the details have not yet been arranged, but several professional football stars are slated to entertain the boys with tales of their football experiences.

Lions and Flyers Clash in St. Louis

Washington's Lions terminate a brief road trip in St. Louis tonight when they meet the Flyers in an American Hockey League match.

On Friday night they return to Uline Arena at 8:30 o'clock, seeking their sixth straight win over Eddie Shore's Springfield Indians.

White Bread Cited As 'Nerve Poisoner'

Science Group at Chicago Told It May Lead to Instability and Alcoholism

Chicago, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Most of the white bread eaten today by Americans contains a "nerve poison" that may be a cause of mental instability—including alcoholism—Dr. Anton J. Carlson, professor emeritus of the University of Chicago, said today.

Carlson said tests show the chemical nitrogen trichloride, used in the bleaching and aging of grain in making white bread, was poisonous to the nervous systems of monkeys, rats and dogs.

He said at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science that a wide-scale investigation should be conducted to determine definitely whether the aging chemical hurts the health of man.

Bad Effect Claimed

Asserting that the chemical apparently changes "a good protein into a bad one," Carlson said it could be a contributing cause of alcoholism in that the tests in animals show it causes mental disturbances such as epilepsy.

"Very frequently," he said, "we have found that mental instability leads to alcoholism."

Human Blood Changes Held Caused by Alcohol

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—Strange chemical changes in human blood, apparently associated with strong emotions and also with a craving for alcohol, were described today to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The findings were reported by Dr. Oskar Diethelm, psychiatrist of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical College, New York, where promising new clinical studies are being made into the causes and problems of alcoholism.

Dr. Diethelm said studies of several hundred patients during various emotional changes showed their blood contained substances that might affect a certain muscle in rabbits in one of three different ways.

He stressed that while much work remains to be done, one kind of effect was produced by blood from persons whose pronounced emotion was tension; the second in instances of anxiety, and the third when resentment was the outstanding emotion.

"All three types of effects have been seen in alcoholic patients," he said, but the third, indicating resentment, was observed most frequently in them.

"Significant differences in the effect of the blood on the (rabbit) muscle have been seen during periods of craving for alcohol and periods when this craving was satisfied," Dr. Diethelm added. The chemical substances have not been identified yet and studies are continuing.

New Organisms Found

Tiny living organisms, some dangerous and some possibly new, have been found flating high in the frigid air over the Arctic ocean and ice, two Canadian scientists reported.

The organisms are fungous spores, and were "trapped" by Canadian airplanes at nearly a mile height, said Drs. S. M. Pady and N. V. Plunin of McGill University.

There are many different kinds of fungi or molds, some of which can cause diseases in plants, animals, or man. Their spores or seeds are found almost everywhere in the air. The surprise, the scientists said, was to find them in such relative abundance at the desolate top of the world, although it is known that living fungous spores often are carried thousands of miles by wind.

Most of those picked up in flights over the Arctic ocean and near the magnetic North Pole are the kind that grow in dead or decayed matter, but a few are known to cause important plant diseases, like wheat rust.

Rocket Used As Thermometer

Use of a V-2 rocket as a flying thermometer and barometer to record atmospheric temperatures and pressures at altitudes "several times as high as by any other direct method" was described by Dr. Ralph J. Havens of the Naval Research Laboratory, Washington, D. C.

"The measurements show that the pressure drops by a factor of ten every ten miles up to an altitude of 70 miles while the temperature increases from a minimum of (75 degrees below zero Fahrenheit) at 12 miles to a maximum of 110 degrees (above zero) Fahrenheit at 30 miles," he said.

"At 70 miles the temperature is again above 100 degrees Fahrenheit and is increasing quite rapidly with altitude."

Communist Barrage Advances To Within 12 Miles of Mukden

Nanking, Dec. 29 (AP).—Communists, advancing behind a heavy artillery barrage, have penetrated within 12 miles of Mukden, and the noise of battle is clearly audible in that isolated Manchurian city, an independent Chinese press dispatch said today.

It said 20,000 Communists had pushed into a government position 15 miles west of Mukden and one column had advanced 3 miles farther after an all-night artillery bombardment.

Later, it said, the most advanced Communists were hurled back.

Five thousand Communists were reported killed in a battle at Hsinlitun, 70 miles west of Mukden.

Hsin Min Pao and other Nanking papers said Communist raiders had cut all four of the railway lines fanning out from Peiping, isolating that major city of North China.

China Aid Readied

Peiping, China, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart said today the U. S. State Department was preparing an aid program for China and there was a "good chance" Congress would approve it.

Stuart warned, however, there might be restrictions "to insure that any money given China would be used for the purpose intended."

Arms Factory Shipped

Ottawa, Dec. 29 (AP).—Equipment for a small arms ammunition factory has been shipped from Canada to China as part of the ten million dollar deal by China for Canadian military equipment, the Canadian Press said today.

French Reds Face Loss of Gas Rations

Paris, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—Jules Moch, Socialist Minister of the Interior, told the National Assembly today he was cutting off the Communist Party's monthly gasoline ration "because the Republic has the right to defend itself."

The announcement was greeted with shouted insults and cries of protest from the Communist benches.

"I will not give insurgents the means of being more effective," he declared above the din, charging that Communists had stolen large quantities of gasoline in plants they occupied during the recent general strike. He added that the strikes "for which you Communists were responsible" sharply reduced France's imports of fuel.

This was too much for Fernand Grenier, a Communist deputy. "Shut up, you hypocrite!" he yelled. His colleagues chimed in with "liar!" "assassin!" and "you doormat for De Gaulle!"

Like all other French political parties, the Communists have been receiving a special allotment of gasoline ration tickets each month from the Ministry of the Interior. The parties are supposed to use this extra fuel for campaign purposes.

The Assembly voted 521 against 72 tonight for creation of individual files on every taxpayer to suppress evasion.

Under the existing collection system, Frenchmen are bound to pay several different taxes to separate offices. There has been no coordination between these bureaus.

The Council of the Republic, which is the upper and advisory House of Parliament, passed the government's supertax measure by 150 against 121.

Greeks File Complaint Against Yugoslavia

Lake Success, Dec. 29 (AP).—Greece formally charged Yugoslavia today with violating the "anti - warmonger" resolution adopted by the United Nations Assembly at its recent session.

This was the first time a member of the U.N. had invoked the measure, which was adopted unanimously after Russia had given up her efforts to push through a resolution charging the United States, Greece and Turkey with "warmongering."

Greece also charged Yugoslavia with violating the Assembly's Balkan resolution which forbids Greece's northern neighbors from giving aid to Greek guerillas.

While the Greek note did not call for any specific U. N. action at this time, it was reliably reported that the Athens Government is considering further steps. The special U. N. Balkan Commission was being informed of developments.

Soviet Allots Reparations For 1st Time

Paris, Dec. 29 (AP).—The French Foreign Ministry said today Soviet occupation authorities in Germany had made available for the first time almost 60,000 tons of wheat, wood and motor fuel in reparations from eastern Germany.

The reparations were allotted to 10 countries — the United States, Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Greece, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Egypt and India.

An official said the reparations represented the first time the Soviet Union had carried out her part of the Potsdam Agreement on exchanges of reparations from western and eastern Germany.

The agreement provided that Russia was to receive on behalf of herself and Poland 25 per cent of the industrial equipment removed as reparations from western Germany, and return 60 per cent of the value of this in products from eastern Germany.

The United States has halted reparations deliveries of dismantled German factories to the Soviet Union as reparations on the grounds the Russians have not lived up to all terms of the Potsdam pact in regard to the economic unification of Germany.

23,000 Workers Hack N. Y. From Tons of Frozen Snow

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—More than 24 hours of subfreezing temperatures made an ice pack of the 99 million tons of snow blanketing New York City tonight, and complicated the monumental task of 23,000 workers trying to clear drifts left by Friday's record 25.8-inch storm. The snow caused 77 deaths in the storm belt area extending from Maine to Washington, D. C.

The city struggled back toward normal as subways carried heavier passenger loads, and buses and trolleys reappeared. But 1 or 2 inches of snow were forecast for tomorrow.

The Pennsylvania and Long Island Railroads put a partial embargo on freight shipments to some metropolitan areas. Food supplies were reported "good," and full milk deliveries were made. Fuel was adequate.

Off the main highways, automobile travel still was almost impossible, and many outlying sections in New England and upstate New York received food in trucks following snow plows.

The toll of storm dead, by States, still rising as isolated communities got back into touch with the world, was: New Jersey, 34; New York, 21; Massachusetts, 9; Connecticut, 6; Pennsylvania, 2; Rhode Island, 2; New Hampshire, 2; and Maine, 1.

British Warn Against Markos Recognition

London, Dec. 29 (AP).—Recognition by any nation of the Communist State proclaimed in Greece by Gen. Markos Vafiades would cause a "grave deterioration in the world situation," the British Foreign Office said today.

The Communist press in France and elsewhere in Europe has predicted that states within the Soviet sphere of influence would extend recognition to the Valiades regime. The British note was interpreted as a word of caution particularly directed at Greece's northern neighbors—Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria.

'Fixed' Tickets Decline Again

104 Adjustments Within Past Week Compare With 177 Six Weeks Ago

The number of traffic tickets "fixed" last week dropped to 104 as compared to 132 the week before, police reported yesterday.

It is the lowest number reported adjusted since statistics on "fixed" tickets were first published six weeks ago following a controversy in which the corporation counsel's office ruled they were public property. At that time, 177 adjustments were reported.

Of last week's 104 adjustments, 97 were warnings and 7 cancellations, lists from the police precincts and traffic division show.

Fourteen motorists were given warnings after they told police their cars were disabled. Another 13, including four doctors and a nurse, were granted warnings because they made emergency stops.

Seven motorists were excused with warnings because they were strangers in town, and another seven because they had received no previous warnings. Four tickets were cancelled because of diplomatic immunity.

Cancellations and warnings for the week of December 21-28 follow:

Traffic Division—11 warnings; 1 cancellation.

First Precinct—2 warnings; no cancellations.

D. C. Workers Cleared in 'Tip' Probe

As far as the District Building is concerned, the books are closed on the controversy over Christmas gifts to District employes.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, engineer commissioner, wound up his investigation of alleged "tipping" of District employes with Christmas gifts when he received assurances from employes of the Department of Inspection that they had received only "token" remembrances.

He asked all employes of the Department of Inspection to list with him all Christmas gifts received from individuals and firms with whom they conducted business. The request was an outgrowth of a disclosure that a list of Highway Department employes had been distributed to contractors early in December with Christmas in mind.

General Young refused to confirm or deny that he had completed an investigation of the Christmas gift situation in the District Building. Other sources revealed, however, that no one reported any substantial gift.

The investigation was limited to building inspection employes. Highway Department employes were not asked to list their gifts. Nor were the three Commissioners.

Fairlington Trash Man Is Arrested

The warrant for his arrest was sworn out by Hayes F. Adams, a Fairlington striker. Smith was released under a $500 bond for appearance at 9:30 a. m. today in Arlington County Court.

A spokesman for the Building Service Employes International Union (AFL) said Adams took out the warrant after Smith reportedly drew a gun on strikers who were slow in moving out of his way near a maintenance shed.

Smith's firm, 610 Delaware ave. sw., signed a permanent contract with Fairmac Corp., owners of the apartment development, after the strike began to collect trash and garbage.

Fairmac Manager William A. Ziegler, meanwhile, said he had received a letter from Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg urging the management and union get together, but he said so far no such meeting has been arranged.

Democrat Gets Cumberland Post

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 29 (AP).—The Mayor and Council today elected Thomas B. Finan to be Cumberland's city attorney, after council members refused Mayor Thomas S. Post's suggestion that he be permitted to make the appointment.

He will succeed Charles Z. Heskett, who resigned today because of failing sight, after almost 22 years in office. Finan was appointed to serve out Heskett's term, which runs until April 1.

Hoffman Demands Tenants and Veterans Settle Fight Over Naylor Gardens Sale

Present Occupants, Faced With Eviction When Controls End, Protest at Hearing

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Feuding over the sale of Naylor Gardens blazed anew at the Capitol yesterday, then burned down by evening to the question of how tenants may be protected if there is a temporary suspension of rent controls.

1. The Veterans Cooperative Housing Association which is ready to buy the 748-unit Naylor Gardens project for $5,125,000.

2. The Naylor Gardens Association, representing tenants who, first, oppose the sale, and, second, want to be sure that their rights as tenants will be protected if the sale is completed.

3. Defense Home Corp., which now owns the project and is ready to sell it to the Veterans Cooperative.

The rent control question comes into the sale dispute because the Veterans Cooperative, in buying the property, has undertaken to protect the tenant rights of present occupants only until the end of rent control.

Occupants fear a time may come when rent control will be removed and then reimposed, leaving a period when they may be subject to evictions or rent increases.

The cooperative group has about 430 members buying individual apartments, but only 200 have actually moved in. Plans call for the others to move in as vacancies occur in normal turnover until the end of rent control.

On Tenant Protection

Some 250 persons, men, women and a scattering of children, crowded the big House Ways and Means Committee room to listen and to take part in frequent applause.

About 3 p. m., after hearing both sides, Hoffman advised them to get together and settle their differences. He adjourned the hearing to let them do it. A moment later an argument started about who should be admitted to the settlement meeting. B. T. Fitzpatrick, a director of Defense Homes Corp., said it should be limited to the lawyers for each side. Paul Porter, former price administrator, representing the Naylor Gardens Association, and William A. Roberts, representing the Veterans' Cooperative, insisted on being present.

When the conference ended about 5 p. m. Fitzpatrick told reporters that the main issue was whether the form of the lease to be given by Defense Homes to the present occupants should contain protective clauses similar to those now in the proposed sale contract, or should cover any lapse in rent control.

He said it had been agreed to give tenants leases. He said his next move would be to discuss the point of disagreement informally with members of the board of Defense Homes, and report to Hoffman today.

Hoffman said if the agreement was not completed the hearing would resume at 10 a. m. If there is agreement, he said, the hearing will not resume. He predicted there would be an agreement.

Roberts explained that the contracts between the Veterans Cooperative and its members were based on the assurance that they could move in at least when rent control goes out and he could not agree to weaken that.

Among witnesses at the hearing before Hoffman was former Representative Victor Wickersham (D., Okla.), now a Washington real estate dealer who was hired by the Veterans' Cooperative to help sell the apartments.

He appeared after Lieut. Comdr. Rowan L. Scarborough, a tenant, protested that unethical sales methods had been used to sell the apartments. He said a man identified by another salesman as a publicity man for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation named "Raines" had been adivsing prospective purchasers to buy apartments.

Wickersham testified that the man was Homer F. Rains, "a friend of mine, and a builder from Detroit who is temporarily doing building in Washington." He said Rains was not a salesman, but was out at Naylor Gardens in an advisory capacity.

Later, Roberts testified that Wickersham had undertaken to sell apartments for a commission of not more than 3 per cent, payable if the sale of the project was completed. He said his commissions would total about $34,000. Wickersham said that expenses, including advertising and salesmen's salaries, would total at least $25,000.

Hearing Set On Collapse Of Building

The first hearing of the Empire Building Investigating Committee is scheduled for today at 2 p. m. in the District Building.

Whether the session will be open or closed to the public and the press was undecided last night. Committee Chairman Robert H. Davis, director of the District Department of Inspections, said he would consult on the matter with Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, the Engineer Commissioner who appointed the group.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester Gray, another committee member, said the group will make the decision at today's meeting, at which four witnesses, whose identity has not been disclosed, are to testify.

Meanwhile, Police Lieut. David McCutcheon, who heads the police detail at the scene of the collapsed building, said he hoped to reopen New York ave. to west bound traffic and 9th st. for north bound vehicles by tonight.

From 20 to 30 witnesses are expected to be called by the committee at sessions in Davis' office, a committee member said. After completing hearings and further studies of materials stored at American University the group will submit a report to the District Commissioners.

Man Dies After Blow

Charred Bodies of Fire Victims Recovered

Unison, Va., Dec. 29 (Spl.).—Charred remains of three small children were recovered today from the ruins of a 207-year-old log house which burned near here last night.

The victims, two boys, one 3 and the other 8, and a girl, 6, all children of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jackson, were recovered by C. F. Reed, Leesburg deputy sheriff. The father is a tenant on the farm of John B. Lawson.

Jackson, his wife, Katherine, and an 18-month-old child, who escaped from the blazing two-story house, which was erected in 1740, are now living nearby with Jackson's brother, Fenton. The children burned to death were sleeping upstairs.

Housing Project of 338 Units In Chevy Chase Is Approved

Erection of a three million dollar, 338-unit apartment house in Chevy Chase, Md., was approved yesterday by the Montgomery County Commissioners.

The rezoning, from Residential A to C, of a 30-acre tract, situated on both sides of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad track north of East-West Highway, and east of Connecticut avenue, has been asked by the Chevy Chase Land Co.

Approval of the rezoning petition yesterday followed by one week a two-hour hearing on the petition by the county commissioners. At the hearing, 41 persons appeared in favor of the application, and 14 against it.

In recommending approval of the petition, the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission earlier had cited the present housing shortage and described the plan as "a worthwhile, well-conceived, and much needed rental development."

Approval of the apartment project was contingent upon the setting aside of a five-acre tract by the builder to be used as a school site.

The favorable action by the commissioners marked the second approval of a large apartment project within the past few months for Montgomery County. A multi-million dollar apartment hotel project at Pook's Hill on the Rockville pike was approved several months ago.

Preliminary Water Bond Election Set

Resident landowners in Falls Church will vote January 27 in a special election designed to pave the way for a second election on a proposed million-dollar water bond issue.

The January 27 election date was set by the Town Council last night after Town Attorney Larue Van Meter said the property owners would have to vote first to authorize the bond election in which all qualified voters could participate.

The dual election system is provided in the town's charter, he said.

In the event the landowners vote in favor of the bond issue proposal, the Town Council then would ask the Fairfax County Circuit Court to set a date for the second referendum.

The water bond issue would be used to finance a proposed water expansion program to include construction of a 24-inch water main from Chain Bridge to Chesterbrook and a 20-inch main from Chesterbrook to the site of a proposed one million gallon reservoir at Mount Daniel on the outskirts of the town. Four addition new 12-inch pipe lines would circle the town and connect with existing water lines.

Water for the expanded system would be purchased from the District under terms of a recent congressional bill authorizing Washington to sell water to nearby suburban areas.

After setting the special election date the council last night authorized Town Clerk Claude M. Wells to prepare a list of resident landowners eligible to vote. Potential voters need not be qualified under the State voting code but they must live in the town. Property owners living outside the town limits wil lnot be eligible.

The resolution authorizing the election specifies that any bonds sold be matured over a 35-year period. It also sets a 6 per cent interest ceiling.

D. C. Man Gets $500 Fine on Gaming Count

A Washington man was fined $500 and given a year's suspended sentence in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday when he pleaded guilty in Prince Georges County Court at Upper Marlboro to violation of the gambling laws.

Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie, suspending the sentence against Glenn E. Elliott, 51, of 2115 Pennsylvania ave. nw., a former Upper Marlboro barber, warned the Washington man the sentence would have to be served if he appeared in the court again on a similar charge within two years.

Charges against George J. Wyville, 19, of Upper Marlboro, arrested at the same time, were ordered held in abeyance indefinitely on recommendation of State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie because of Wyville's age and previous good record. The court, however, may bring the charges into effect at any time it wishes.

The two were arrested by Prince Georges County Police Corpl. Roland Sweitzer and Policeman Emmett F. G. Gray of the Hyattsville substation, on December 16, in a beer parlor near Marlboro. The policemen, wearing laborer's clothes at the time, said they made two bets with the men on horse races.

CIO Supporting GSI Workers In Test Dispute, Leader Asserts

CIO unions will give full support to the local cafeteria workers' union in event of a strike, Henry Beitscher, president of the CIO Industrial Union Council, told Government Services, Inc., yesterday.

Meeting yesterday with Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant III, president of GSI which operates 42 cafeterias here where a strike is threatened, Beitscher said the dispute was of great interest to the CIO.

Beitscher told General Grant that two and a half million CIO members were in the same category as the local cafeteria workers, having refused to submit affidavits under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Gen. Grant Unimpressed

The contract which Local 476 of the United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers, UPWA (CIO), has with GSI, expires at midnight, December 31. More than 1600 workers are involved, and a strike is threatened.

General Grant said he would refer Beitscher's statements on the dispute to the GSI board, but stated they "would not change the situation whatsoever."

GSI has refused to negotiate with the union unless it files non-Communist affidavits and financial statements with the National Labor Relations Board. The union charges that this action is intended as a "smokescreen" for "the real issue of a wage increase." The union says the average cafeteria worker's pay is $21.90 a week.

Election Request to Be Denied

A GSI request for an NLRB election here will be dismissed "within a day or two" if the cafeteria workers union fails to comply with filing the necessary affidavits, Ross Madden, regional director of the NLRB, declared last night.

There is no indication that the union wil lfile the affidavits. In requesting the election, GSI questioned the right of the cafeteria union to represent its workers and also sought to force filing of the affidavits.

Inasmuch as the CIO union is the only one which could appear on an election ballot, Madden says the NLRB has no alternative but to dismiss the petition. This has no effect on the union's position.

Aid Promised To Mother Of Lola June

Police and welfare officers are continuing efforts to find the mother of Lola June, 8-week-old baby abandoned Friday, only to help the mother, not to "punish" her.

"We want to reassure the mother that we will do our utmost to work out any plan she suggests when she makes herself known to us," said Mrs. Helen Smith, field unit supervisor in the child welfare department, last night.

The mother could keep her child and receive public assistance funds, if necessary, or the child could be placed temporarily in a home, Mrs. Smith said.

Child Doing Well

Captain Rhoda Millikan, head of the Police Woman's Bureau, pointed out that the "loving care" the mother had shown ruled out the probability of likelihood of action by the United States attorney's office.

Police are only interested in seeing that the mother and child get whatever help they need, the captain added.

Meanwhile, a nurse in the pediatric ward at Gallinger Hospital reported the tot, who now weights 7 pounds 1 ounce, "is doing very well—she's very happy with us and we're crazy about her."

Found in Vestibule

Lola June was found in the vestibule of a home at 4936 Hurst ter. nw. at about 10:30 p. m. Friday. She was warmly dressed, and covered with three blankets.

Beside her was a box with extra clothes, milk and feeding instruction. A note explained Lola June was born out of wedlock November 7.

GI Students oVte for Return To School in Dispute With VA

GI students of Columbia Technical Institute decided last night to attend classes next Monday, though a contract for further study still is in dispute between the Veterans' Administration and the school.

At a rally in the Veterans Service Center, 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw., more than 100 of the school's GI students unanimously indorsed a return-to-school recommendation made by their trouble-shooting student committee.

Talks To Be Resumed

The veteran students were cheered, however, by news that contract talks between the VA and the school will be resumed today.

Crux of the VA-Columbia Tech squabble centers around the school's refusal to give the VA a financial statement, itemizing costs.

According to VA officials, the Government is authorized by law to pay for former servicemen's tuition only at schools whose rates yield 10 per cent or less profit. Such information is obtained from financial statements, which all schools must render.

Seed Oyster Sale Outside Va. Banned

Richmond, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—Sale of Virginia seed oysters outside of the State ceased today with the termination of a temporary injunction and the refusal of Judge Julien Gunn to grant a permanent restraint upon the ban of such sale.

The Richmond Circuit Court judge refused the petition of J. R. Houghton, Cornelius Campbell and the Oyster Tongers and Seafood Workers 265 (AFL) of Newport News, declaring that the sale of seed oysters would "seriously injure" the State's rocks and shoals. He said it further would "reduce the supply of seed oysters below the demands of the Virginia planters."

Holding that Section 3218 of the Virginia Code is valid and constitutional, Judge Gunn ruled that Charles M. Lankford, jr., "acted upon reasonable and justifiable grounds" under this law in ordering that no permits be issued to allow tonging of seed oysters for transportation out of Virginia.

Lankford and Attorney General Harvey B. Apperson were defendants in the case.

Counsel for the complainants noted objections to the order on these grounds:

(1) That the statute under which Lankford acted imposes a two-cents-a-bushel tax on seed oysters for transportation out of State and that this is a direct tax on interstate commerce and therefore unconstitutional.

(2) The law "does not give those dealing in seed oysters the equal protection of the law as guaranteed by our State and Federal constitution" and the code "permits discrimination between people of the same class."

(3) Since such oysters may be tonged for sale within Virginia the statute does not effect conservation.

Western Union Wage Panel Plans Hearing Friday

A three-man panel in the Western Union wage dispute yesterday set Friday as the tentative date for a first meeting with union and company officials. It selected Eugene Myer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, as panel chairman.

Waldo E. Fisher, University of Pennsylvania professor, and Charles A. Horsky, Washington attorney, are the other two panel members.

The group said hearings will begin Friday if the dat is agreeable to Western Union and the three AFL unions involved in the dispute. Otherwise they will begin next week.

The commercial telegraphers, telegraph workers and telegraph employes unions, representing 50,000 workers, postponed a strike scheduled December 23 to let the panel decide disputed points in their expiring contracts. After that, both sideswill resume negotiations of the union's demand for a 15-cent hourly wage increase.

Ride Wrecks Auto, Driver Is Unscratched

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—"Any landing you can walk away from is a good landing" is a flying slogan, but it might be some consolation for Steuart F. Clark even though his license is limited to an automobile.

Clark took off today in his car, jumping a retaining wall, knocked down an iron fence and dropped 20 feet to Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks. The car landed on its top, a virtual wreck, but Clark crawled out unhurt and walked away.

Child Care Unit May Be Ready By January 6

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The Carbery Child Day Care Center is expected to be back in operation by January 6 as result of action taken yesterday by the Board of Public Welfare.

The board voted unanimously to reopen the center, which is expected to be used to its capacity of 35 children. They acted on the recommendation of Mrs. Gladys S. Cook, president of the advisory committee on Child Day Care Centers, who explained that closing of the Grant School Center made funds available for operation of the Carbery Center in the Stuart Junior High School Annex at 5th and D sts. ne.

Raymond F. Clapp, acting welfare director, who put the request before the board, explained that of the 13 children who had been using the Grant School Center, 10 probably will be entered at Carbery.

Many Children Need Center

The Welfare Department already has names of 21 children eligible to attend the Carbery Center, and a survey of the neighborhood has shown that 87 children in the area are in need of daycare center care.

The day care center at Grant Elementary School, 22d and G sts. nw., was closed on December 24 because of its small enrollment.

The board also passed a regulation to set up a new category in general public assistance for persons over 65 years of age. Establishment of this category will qualify the agency for additional Federal reimbursements. The regulation would affect an estimated two hundred persons now on general public assistance, Clapp said.

The board also adopted a recommendation of its agency committee to change its regulation on income to indigent persons from relatives. Under existing regulations, the department has been considering certain income available to an individual or family if there are responsible relatives, regardless of whether the income actually has been received by the person on relief rolls.

Huff Is Praised

Under the regulation adopted yesterday, relatives will be considered "responsible" only if they live and have employment within the District of Columbia. The board also moved to seek funds sufficient to revert to the policy in effect until last August, when only funds actually received were counted as income to persons on relief rolls.

The Welfare Board also adopted a resolution on the death of Ray L. Huff, director of the Welfare Department here, in which the board declared in part that Huff "brought to the office of Director of Public Welfare a penetrating insight into its problems, a broad knowledge of the means of their solution, and a determination to solve them. "He radiated a confidence in the goodness of people, and was imbued with the desire to help the unfortunate and the unwanted."

Greenbelt Woman, Wins $650 Prize On Radio Program

Because she remembered whom Screen Actor Van Johnson married, Mrs. Phyllis E. Eckhart of Greenbelt, Md., was $650 richer yesterday.

Appearing Sunday night on the CBS "Strike it Rich" show in New York, Mrs. Eckhart ran up the starting $25 given by the sponsor to $325. Before "betting" the $325 on the final question with the prospect of getting $650, Mrs. Eckhart asked her husband, William R. Eckhardt, a University of Maryland student, what to do.

"Shoot the works," he shouted from the audience.

The question was "Who did Van Johnson marry?" And Mrs. Eckhardt remembered it was Eve Abbott, former stage actress and divorced wife of Keenan Wynn, movie comedian.

Asked why she wanted to "strike it rich," Mrs. Eckhardt told the Nation-wide radio audience she and her husband were afraid that Federally owned Greenbelt would be sold and that they didn't have the required $250 for a down payment on a home.

Baltimore Per Diem Workers to Get Raise

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—All employes of Baltimore City who work on a per diem basis will get a 9-cent-per-hour wage increase under a "declaration of policy" announced by Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro and ratified by the Board of Estimates today.

In addition to the raise, such employes will be allowed three weeks' vacation with pay after 15 years' service and eight paid holidays a year.

United States Commissioner F. Archie Meatyard, Bethesda, said yesterday he would ask for an immediate opinion from the State legal authority, after Montgomery County officials disagreed with a stand taken by Judge Warren Browning of Bethesda Police Court.

The dispute arose when Judge Browning said MacArthur blvd. is Federally-owned and hence outside county jurisdiction. He said he would refuse to try persons arrested on MacArthur blvd. by county police.

John Lane, 46, of 4432 E st. se., yesterday was placed under $300 bail for a January 29 jury trial on a charge of snipping a woman's hair.

Mrs. Georgie Brown, 30, of the 5 st. address, told police she recognized Lane as the man who cut off "a sizeable piece" of her hair as she sat in a movie the night of December 12.

Lane was arrested yesterday. He pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault.

Rivaled Niagara

Connecticut's Submerged Falls Found

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—Richard J. Lougee, Clark University physiographer, today said he had discovered an ancient waterfall—rivaling Niagara Falls in size—at East Haddam, Conn., in the gorge of the Connecticut River.

Lougee said only half of the falls is above sea level now. The other half was submerged as the sea rose during the so-called post-glacial period.

The cataract sprawled across the Connecticut valley some 20,000 years ago, he said, and lasted at least 4000 years. It disappeared as the last ice sheet melted away from New England, leaving rich deposits of sediment.

Lougee's findings of the underground waterfall ended a 19-year search for the outlet of the great glacial lake which was spread over Connecticut valley, he told a conference of three geography societies at the University of Virginia. He said he found evidence in 1928 indicating the lake had drained abruptly—probably within a year's time—when the ice front stood at what is now Lyme, N. H., 10 miles north of Hanover.

The Connecticut valley in Massachusetts and Connecticut was completely drained, exposing the lowest parts of the lake floor 150 feet below the shoreline and creating the Connecticut River.

Earlier speakers emphasized geographic study as a key to understanding the past and to planning for the future—both in war and peace.

No Cream in Their Coffee

Sleighbells Jingle as Debs Brave Gotham Snowdrifts; Elders Slosh to Vanderbilts

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

MAROONED on New York's snow-piled steppes, life is rugged indeed. There's no cream for morning coffee, no transportation except subways, in some hotels fuel is falling low. Young fry have been skiing to debutante parties and El Morocco, their elders mushed afoot on weekend rounds, while wolves were forced to howl in streets instead of taxis.

The post-Christmas storm lulled long enough for Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt to give her usual afternoon reception. Mrs. V. set the hour earlier so she could make Mrs. Harrison Williams' dance. Now that she's moved uptown, the Vanderbilt party is simpler than in the old days at 640 Fifth ave. Gone are the presents for hundreds of guests, gone are the seated supper for babies and teen-agers. The hostess, in a red sequinned jacket and headband, received seated on a sofa, her 6-foot plus English butler keeping the line of friends moving.

Mrs. Williams, her distinguished gray hair still tinted a less distinguished brown, gathered in all top-drawer foreigners in town. The Duchess of Windsor, who switched from an afternoon pearl gray and sables to darker satin, drifted through the crowds with her Duke in tow. The Duke and Duchess looked so dazzingly well they had everyone whispering they've had a joint face-lifting operation. The Duke's articles in Life Magazine have boosted his prestige or perhaps people's sympathy for him. His razzle dazzle life seems odd after a severe, almost austere upbringing.

By Ski and Sleigh

FRIDAY night, with snow still falling, half a dozen debutante parties and several teen-age dances were on schedule. Along with buses and taxis, car-renting companies folded. Frantic hostesses paged livery stables; Mrs. Morton Schwartz corralling a brace of speedy sleighs to trundle her daughter's dinner guests to their dance. Other kids put on ski pants, subwayed to dinner carrying party frocks in boxes, later changed in hotel dressing rooms.

Possessors of precious theater tickets subwayed, too. Scarcely a Broadway seat went begging. Appreciative actors after final curtain thanked audiences for their patronage, surely a new twist these opulent days.

Home-going night club patrons threaded the West Fifties and Park and Lexington aves. Indian file, stepping in each other's footsteps through the drifts.

Gotham's snappiest wedding almost came a cropper. The Byron Foys' Joan and Raymond French were married Saturday. Friday, Cecil Beaton was to photograph the bridal group. There was to be a rehearsal, but the bridegroom en route from his Greenwich home got stuck in the snow. Two bridesmaids disappeared. Even Byron Foy, son-in-law of the late Walter Chrysler and motor tycoon in his own right, couldn't hire a car. Saturday he managed to round up a flock to ferry guests from church to reception.

Now It's the Varsawiana

THOUGH THE Hotel Plaza placed a blackboard in its main lobby with the chalked admonition fuel was low, conserve electric lights or else, Serge Obolensky went merrily on with plans to introduce a new dance down in his Plaza Rendezvous, the newly revamped Plaza grill, favorite stamping ground of the Scott Fitzgerald era.

Serge, a skilled stepper, popularized the Viennese Waltz, brought the Lambeth Walk to New York, now is launching the Varsawiana, a dance which came from Poland, via Vienna, Mexico and Texas cowboys. It's not too difficult, but it's terribly active, the gent clasping his gal from the back a la schottische.

The Varsawiana is launching a dance to take place at a party to benefit the Botnical Gardens of all things. The B. G., it seems, goes in for extremely valuable scientific research on the side. Biggest theatrical excitement of the moment is "Inside the U. S. A.," a musical based on John Gunther's tome, starring Bea Lillie with Howard Dietz whipping up its spicy lyrics. It is in rehearsal, promises to be a sensation.

Crowninshield Is Mourned

SAD NOTE to the hectic holidays was the death of Frank Crowninshield, beau gallant, wit and lovable character of a more placid era. He survived an operation last spring and after his bill was paid hosted a huge dinner to his doctor. A few months ago he helped Serge Obolensky put on the Plaza Hotel's fortieth anniversary ball. Long editor of Vanity Fair and Conde Nast writer, Frank cleaned up a tidy fortune buying French Moderns cheap, later selling them at de luxe auctions. He helped innumerable writers, artists and was the last expert on the eighties, nineties to wield an ornamentally historical pen. New York will miss him.

AAUW Hears Plea for Aid to Indians

By Genevieve Reynolds

Majority of American Indians are extremely poor. They are living below our country's minimum standards of decency, and the Navajoc in Arizona are facing actual starvation. So declared Mrs. Ruth Muskrat Bronson, secretary of the National Congress of American Indians.

Guest of honor and speaker at a tea yesterday afternoon given by the Washington branch, American Association of University Women, she said, "the Navajo Indians are existing on less than 900 calories daily. Several homes I visited recently on the reservation had no food except a few green squash."

Of the some 400,000 Indians in the United States, aproximately 200,000 live on reservations. In Arizona and New Mexico the Indians are not allowed to vote nor to exercise any political rights. Nor are they permitted to participate in Social Security programs, according to Mrs. Bronson.

No Schools for Navajos

She told how the Navajos—most primitive of the 200 existing tribes—had plead in vain for schools the past 10 years. "Twenty thousand children among them have no schools."

Painting an over-all bleak picture of the American Indians' plight, she asserted, "Indian affairs are at the lowest point since Helen Hunt Jackson write her 'Century of Dishonor' in 1881."

Mrs. Bronson charged that several current congressional bills are designe dto strip the Indians of what property they have left and called upon the university women to help defeat them. Citing a few specific bills, she said that one now pending would repeal a 1934 act granting Indians the right to govern themselves on reservations.

Opposes Alaska Bill

The worst, however, according to Mrs. Bronson, is the one pertaining to Alaska, introduced by Senator Hugh Butler of Nebraska, the chairman of the Public Lands Committee o fthe Senate.

"Senate Joint Resolution No. 162 not only would abolish all Indian reservations in Alaska but would deprive the tribes of the undefined property which they now hold," she continued, adding, "If this land steal goes through, it will mean we haven't learned anything from history and that we are no better people than we were 200 years ago."

Back from a recent meeting of the NCAI held in Santa Fe, N. Mex., she pointed ont that the Congress was organized four years ago in order to give the Indians a chance to crystallize their problem and to express their wills.

"Strongest hope is that the Indians themselves are beginning to face and tackle their own problems," concluded Mrs. Bronson. "They do not want charity but a chance to make a decent living and to give their children an education so they can obtain jobs off the reservations."

Mrs. Willard E. Givens, fellowship chairman, introduced Mrs. Bronson. During the tea hour, at which Mrs. Frank Edgington was hostess, members viewed a display of Indian handicrafts.

Girl's So-Called Best Friend Muscles in On All Her Dates, Mocks Her Admirers and Sportively Mistreats Her Little Brother

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 15; my best girl friend, Sue, is 16; and my boy friend Bill is 17. My problem is Sue.

Whenever I am going out with Bill, Sue always seems to be on hand with no plans of her own, and Bill in order to be polite always asks her to join us, which she always does. Bill is getting very annoyed about this; and I might add that she makes rude remarks to him and behind his back.

Also, when other boys say "Hello," etc., to me, she always makes rude remarks to them; and when their backs are turned she makes fun of the way they walk, talk, etc. When I ask her to stop this she says, "Why should I? They aren't my friends."

Baits Little Boy With Bad Example

AT MY request she comes to my house every school day afternoon for a snack, and uses bad language around my 4-year-old brother; and as a result he gets punished for repeating it. She also heckles him in the street and strikes him when he slaps her for this. I have asked her to stop this but she won't.

How can I get Sue to behave as she should, and not always be hanging around my boy friend and me? Please answer soon.

V. C.

So-Called Friend Exudes Bad Will

DEAR V. C.: Sue presents a behavior problem for a specialist. You can't change her. She is a badly twisted personality, definitely off on the wrong foot in life and can't be considered a friend of yours. Indeed it's absurd to apply the term "best friend" to her.

Who is a friend? A friend is one who is not hostile, who is not a foe, who is attached to another by esteem, respect and affection—and judging by Sue's rough handling of all your other relationships, there is little, if any, good will, respect or affection in her feelings for you.

Then why does she hang around, humoring your delusion that she is your devoted crony? I suppose because she is enviously attracted by your popularity rating, which she jealously resents even while using it as a convenience to keep herself in social circulation. And also because she is making a play for Bill, in her characteristic roughneck way.

Time to Oust Troublemaker

FURTHERMORE, her jarring rudeness to your other boy friends signifies overall perverse rivalry. In the main she is trying to needle them into noticing her; and failing that, her secondary purpose is to tear down your appreciation of them, or any pride you may feel in their approbation.

In using bad language before your little brother—which gets him in trouble, as she knows—and otherwise cruelly baiting him, despite your anxious futile protests, she is figuratively twisting your arm for liking him, I daresay—probably because family sentiment is an experience unknown to her, hence she resents your having it.

As I've said, you can't change her. The best you can do in self-defense is to oust her from the role of best friend, starting now. The way to prevent her from spoiling your dates by tagging along is to give her a blunt direct brush-off, before or after your beau appears. That's simple common sense; and believe me, she'd make short shrift of you in similar circumstances if the tables were turned.

Is It Teasing or Bullying? Parent Must Umpire the Fun

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Every parent with two or more children has to wrestle with teasing. Some children—even some adults—like to get the best of the other fellow. They pretend to something that isn't true. They make a big story hoping the other will fall for it. They hurt a child physically, with tickling, poking, hits that never quite come off, in the hopes that he will imagine more and worse punishment to be right around the corner.

How much of this teasing should a child be expected to accept without rebellion? When does teasing take on the guise of bullying? Where should the parent stand on the subject?

The whole question of teasing should take into account whether the children are equally matched. This is impossible if one child is young and the other older. Then the younger child is at a disadvantage and cannot give as good as he gets. He may not understand the meaning of the teasing, only will know that he is being victimized by it. A child should not have to stand any of this type of teasing and the mother is wise to step in and end it. If she doesn't she is unjust to the younger child; and is encouraging the older one to use his greater knowledge to bully the younger child.

But some teasing among equals is to be countenanced. No child should be so thin-skinned that he cannot have jokes played upon him, or take some mild, physical punishment without getting mad. He should be made to understand that this is a form of play and that he is as capable of it as the next one. Let him learn to laugh and appear to be enjoying himself and the play will be successful. If he cries and gets mad he plays right into the teaser's hand, because teasing is intended to upset him and if it misses the mark, the teaser is not inspired to continue it.

The mother's part is largely interpretive. She helps the child to accept the teasing in good part and to tease in return.

Overweight Needs Easy Exercises

By Ida Jean Kain

If your weight is far above normal, and much of the excess is carried through the midsection, then strenuous exercise is not for you. It would be too great a strain.

You may think that being the case, you'll just skip it entirely. But wait . . . you particularly need corrective exercise to strengthen and tone the muscles of the abdominal wall. When these muscles are flabby, they not only collect more fat, but they are unable to support the weight of the organs so that they sag and crowd each other. This pressure interferes with the circulation of the blood, digestion, elimination, and the smooth running of the body. In other words, sagging abdominal muscles impair your health.

Stop Overeating

To get rid of some of the fat that has infiltrated between the muscle strands, weakening them, you'll have to stop overeating, and cut down just a bit below that so nature can call on the stored fat. And as this fat is removed, these muscles must be strengthened—otherwise the organs which have been partly supported by fat, would tend to sag further.

But they must be easy exercises and taken in a position which avoids strain. The following exercises are very simple and easy enough for almost anyone to take.

Position: Lying flat on back, knees flexed, soles of feet flat on floor.

Movement: The exercise is simply to pull up and in, starting with the lower abdominal muscles and continuing the upward pull of the abdominal wall until the small of the back is pressed flat against the floor. Hold, slowly release. Repeat slowly, ten times.

Movement: By muscular effort, fully expand the abdominal wall as high as comfortable, without strain, and then vigorously contract these muscles, by pulling firmly up and in. Do not hold your breath, just breathe naturally. This exercise should be repeated ten times and taken twice daily.

Finish by contracting the side-front muscles . . .

Movement: Raise hips just slightly off floor, and swing hips from one side to the other, tilting up toward the side as you swing, contracting the side-front abdominal muscles. Then swing back to the other side, tilting up toward that side. The long front muscles are not brought into this exercise, so there is no strain. The action is on the in-pull muscles on the side-front of the abdominal wall.

Can you print an estimated set of fees which it would cost the average white-collar couple without hospitalization or medical insurance to have a baby? We are new to Washington and know no one who has has had one recently and who could tell us what it had cost. Hospitals are unwilling to give a figure over the phone, saying "it varies," and our own M. D. says "it depends." What we would really like to know is what these costs might be, because we should like to plan for a baby. Are you in a position to estimate for us the following:

1) Cost of hospitalization, for five days' care, use of delivery room, special anesthesia (and is there an anaesthetist's bill besides?);

2) Average bill for one child by a well-known obstetrician to a couple in average circumstances;

3) Any extras I may not know about.

The following figures are the actual expenses, kept by methodical parents, of a baby born in a Washington hospital last August.

Room—$13 a day. Because of the crowded hospital situation, this mother remained in a linen room off the delivery room for 24 hours after delivery. When a room was available, they chose to take a lovely, corner room with private bath and telephone, considering it a luxury. A semi-private room would probably have cost $7 to $8 a day, and a private room without bath or telephone something between those two figures. Of course, the cost of the room will be determined by the hospital you go to and the accommodations you have.

Laboratory fee—$3.50. (This included uranalysis, blood test etc. on admission to hospital.

Anaesthetist's fee—$15. (This included the anesthetic.) This fee will vary with how much anesthetic is used and what kind.

Care of baby—$3 a day.

Identification beads and footprint certificate—$1.50.

This young couple had a well known Washington obstetrician deliver the baby. His fee was half of the baby's father's monthly salary—some other obstetrical men charge a flat fee. $150.00 is one such fee charged by a Washington specialist. The obstetrician's fee includes all prenatal care. The patient referred to above made one visit a month for the first six months and two visits a month for the seventh and eighth months. She made weekly visits the last month. His fee also includes a six weeks checkup after delivery.

I have some bronze salt and peppers—heavy weight—with screw bottoms, also of bronze. However, I cannot unscrew the bottoms, apparently some salt got into the grooves. Can you help?

M. A. B.

Screw tops are some times difficult to remove from salt shakers because the salt corrodes. Sometimes the joint can be loosened by striking the edge of the shaker with a knife handle or similar tool. Or, a tight screw cap can usually be loosened by gripping it with a piece of sandpaper or emery cloth. Also, some adjustable pliers are large enough to reach over the top and grasp it tightly enough to enable you to loosen it. Kitchen shears also have metal grips between the handles for this purpose. Before trying to loosen with either pliers or sandpaper, place the shaker under a stream of running hot water so that the heat will expand the outer metal surface, thus helping to loosen it.

I have just spilled a bottle of my baby's formula on the new wallpaper all the way down the steps in the hall. Can you help me? The formula is composed of homogenized milk and Dextri-Maltose No. 1, which contains Maltose, dextrins and sodium chloride (only 2 per cent of this). I have blotted it, but I'm afraid to touch it—I may set the stain. The wallpaper is fairly good, but I am not sure whether it is washable or not. It's an awful mess.

B. F. O'N.

To remove the greasy part of the stain apply a paste to the stained areas made by moistening rug cleaning powder or Fuller's earth and dry-cleaning fluid. Spread the paste on the wallpaper and allow to remain until dry. Remove it with a soft, clean cloth. If some stain remains after the paste is removed (be sure to allow the wallpaper to dry thoroughly so you can see its true condition), apply a second paste made by combining cleaning powder and water. Spread it onto the paper as above. This should remove remaining stain and any ring which resulted from the cleaning fluid paste. If some stain remains when thoroughly dry, repeat the cleaning powder and water paste application. Before starting treatment be sure to test effect of poultices on inconspicuous spot to see if the colors in the paper are affected.

Bill to Increase Postal Rates Due For Early Action

By the United Press

Chairman Edward H. Rees (R., Kans.) of the House Postoffice Committee, said Sunday Congress probably will give "early consideration" to an increase in postal rates.

He based his prediction on the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in granting some 216 railroads a temporary 25 per cent increase in the rates they are paid for carrying the mails. The increase is estimated to give the carriers an additional $34,500,000 in annual revenues.

Reese is the sponsor of a bill, already approved by his committee, which would increase postal rates by $109,000,000. He described this as "just a portion" of the Postoffice Department's estimated deficit of $275,000,000 for 1947.

Improved Radar Spots Speed of Bullet in Gun

By the United Press

Startling improvements in radar make it possible to chart the speed of a bullet while it is still in the barrel of a gun, Army Signal Corps scientists revealed yesterday.

New refinement of wartime radar makes it possible for soldiers to detect the location of artillery firing on them, and to pick out a moving tank from the "clutter" of other motionless objects on the radar screen.

It also can pick up moving troops.

The Signal Corps scientists said some of the equipment is so light it can be carried easily in the field.

Yet it is so accurate that if a stone is tossed in the air, the radar can follow its flight. It even detects the course of flying birds.

Margarine Tax Held 'Fundamental Violation'

Taxes on oleomargarine "violate the fundamental principle of our economy: That every legitimate business has a right to get what business it can," Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) declared in a radio interview Sunday.

Urging passage of his bill to repeal taxes and license requirements, Fulbright said that "this is the only instance I know of anywhere in our economy, in which one product—a legitimate product—is taxed and practically prohibited by affirmative American legislation."

Town Board Candidacies Go Begging

The election is to fill three seats for the next two years on the board of Town Commissioners.

Mrs. Edgar S. Hereford, town clerk, said not a single applicant had filed, despite the deadline last night for so doing. But she added, that was nothing unusual. Not since 1904 has anyone in Upper Marlboro sought a town board post.

G. Gardner Shugart, president of the board, said last night that, as usual, the voters Monday will have to write in on blank ballots names of their choices.

Shugart, who has served five years, Commissioner William T. Davis, 72, who has been on the board 15 years, and Commissioner nounced they do not seek re-Charles L. Wood all have an election, although voters may write in their names just the same.

Voting wil ltake place Monday from 3 to 6 p. m. at the Marlboro firehouse. Wilbur Jones, Richard Sothoron and Montgomery Morrow will serve as judges.

Fairfax Plans To Care for Lone Recluse

Plans are being made by the Fairfax County Welfare Board to put Miss Belle Austin Alger, surviving sister of 65-year-old Miss Eloise Alger, in a welfare boarding home.

Miss Eloise Alger died Sunday morning in her ramshackle house near Burke Station, Fairfax County.

The two sisters, who moved from New York in 1917, lived shut off from the world for 30 years, their privacy guarded by a shotgun.

Miss Belle Austin Alger, 70, found her sister dead Sunday morning, and notified a neighbor, who called police. Police said they found Miss Alger's body on a heap of rags in a second-floor room.

The two sisters had depended on county welfare for their subsistence in recent years. Mrs. Laura Nielsen, a worker at the welfare board, said the board did not like the conditions in which the two spinsters were living, but "we felt these old people had a perfect right to live as they wanted to."

For the present, the elder sister is staying with a neighbor, Mrs. Sallie Green, but the board said this was only temporary. Miss Alger has not yet decided where she wants to go.

The board has made financial arrangements for the burial of Miss Eloise Alger. Funeral services and burial will be held at 2 p. m. today at Fairfax Cemetery.

Seaman Is Held In Fatal Shooting Of Md. Woman

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—An 18-year-old seaman was held without bail today on charges of assaulting and shooting 24-year-old Miss Vivien Crowe who lived 106 days with a bullet in her head.

Herbert de Boissiere was arraigned following the death yesterday of Miss Crowe. She was shot November 14 while sitting in a restaurant and since then doctors were unable to operate because the bullet was close to her brain.

Magistrate Preston A. Pairo entered pleas of innocent for De Boissiere who will be given a hearing later.

4 Hunters Held In King George

Richmond, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—United States Commissioner Melvin Fiegenheimer today ordered four King George County hunters released on $500 bond each pending District Court action on charges of violating duck hunting laws Christmas Eve.

The defendants, Henry T. Berry, Connor Clair, James Alex Crabtree and Jack Darlins, were arrested on warrants charging them with hunting from a baited blind, hunting without duck stamps and exceeding the bag limit.

Earnest R. Atkinson, Federal game warden, testified at the hearing that he and a second warden, Ralph S. Harris, had maintained a lengthy surveillance of the blind, located on Berry's property at Jotank Creek, prior to the alleged violations.

Students Ask Md. To End Book Tax

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Greyhound, undergraduate publication of Loyola College, today proposed a drive to eliminate sales taxes on textbooks sold in Maryland high school and college book stores.

In an editorial, the organ asked for student views on the matter and said that if the response favored exemption, steps would be taken to seek amendment of the tax law.

The State comptroller's office, meantime, said its only comment could be a reminder that under present law such textbook sales were liable for taxation.

Railroad President Plans Retirement

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—Charles Walker Brown, president of the Western Maryland Railroad, announced his retirement plans today: "The first week, I'll just sit. The second week I may rock—a little."

Brown will step down New Year's Day after almost 14 years as president. He will be 68 on January 10 and has been a railroader almost 50 years.

State Funds Urged to Aid Va. Hospitals

Virginia State Senator-elect Charles R. Fenwick said yesterday that he plans to introduce a bill in the State legislature to allow a community to use its funds for support of private and semi-private hospitals.

Commenting on a plan for expansion of hospital facilities in Virginia, Fenwick added that he will propose a bill to indorse the plan of the Virginia Hospital Survey and Construction Division of the Virginia Health Commission.

The plan, approved yesterday by the U. S. Public Health Service, calls for Federal appropriations of funds in Virginia of $2,210,000 per year for five years, providing the amount is doubled by the State.

Equal Shares Proposed

Fenwick said he would propose that the State contribute a share equal to the Federal Government's, and the various areas of the State would make up the balance.

The plan, which has not yet been published, divided the State into 45 areas, of which Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax County comprise one area. The areas are rated on a priority basis, with the Alexandria area ranking eleventh in the State.

The plan, which recommends 5875 more hospital beds in the State, calls for 327 more in Alexandria, 277 more in Arlington, and a 50-bed hospital in Fairfax County. At present, Alexandria has 206 beds, of which 48 are in the private Circle Terrace Hospital, and the rest in Alexandria Hospital. Arlington Hospital has 100 beds, while there are none in Fairfax County.

960 Beds Planned

With the increase, based on a ratio of 5.3 beds for each 1000 persons, the area would have 960 beds, or 654 more than at present.

Although the report does not specify where the additional beds will be put, Herbert N. Gardner of the Division of Hospital Facilities, USPHS, said the report "implied" that enlargements of Arlington and Alexandria hospitals would be made while the 50-bed Fairfax County Hospital would be built near the county courthouse.

Va. Commission Urges Reduction In State Agencies

Richmond, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—The Burch Commission on Reorganization of the State government today sent to Governor Tuck a report which was described as calling for a "considerable reduction" in the present number of State agencies.

Following a three-hour meeting here today, Chairman Thomas G. Burch of Martinsville, said commission members present had joined unanimously in indorsing the tentative findings prepared by a nine-member executive committee.

Details of the proposed consolidations and mergers of State departments, divisions, bureaus, boards and other agencies were carefully guarded and from all indications will remain so until Governor Tuck announces his recommendations to the General Assembly sometime after January 14.

$100,000 Sought For Expressway

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—A $100,000 appropriation will be sought in the City Council January 12 for mapping plans and specifications for a proposed cross-town expressway.

Ordinances to get the limited access highway building started are top business scheduled for the council's first 1948 session.

The highway is planned to link the city street system with Baltimore's new airport at Friendship Church, Anne Arundel County, and the Washington-Baltimore pkwy.

The new roadway will have two lanes on each side of the center strip. Later it would be widened to three lanes on each side.

BARNABY

How does Barnaby expect that "Fairy Godfather" of his to find his Aunt Minerva's house, Ellen?
By magic, I suppose.
Details like that don't bother Barnaby.
I guess not . . . Say, where's Minerva's letter? She drew a little map of the highway and the road to her house.
Not a very good cartograph to fly by, Barnaby. No latitude or longitude. No elevation contours. And no beacons . . . However, your old Fairy Godfather will find your aunt's residence, somehow—

The Cops Wish All Mysteries Were This Simple

The boys at No. 6 are still trying to solve a mystery which broke on Christmas Day.

It was about 6 o'clock, and four of the bluecoats were dreaming wistfully of the fine Christmas dinners being eaten by lucky stiffs who didn't have to work.

The phone rang, and a female voice inquired:

"What are you fellows going to do for food? Most of the restaurants are closed today."

"How well we know that, lady. I dunno what we'll do —and by the way, who is this?"

"I'll be right over."

In a few minutes, in walked Mr. and Mrs. William H. Taylor of 1350 Nicholson st. nw., lugging a great assortment of puddens which had one thing in common: they all smelled wonderful.

Silently the Taylors spread before the startled policemen a real Christmas dinner, complete from soup to nuts. And then, with a cheerful "Merry Christmas," they took their leave.

As I said before, the cops are still trying to crack the most delightful mystery in the annals of No. 6.

MEMO TO CAPITAL TRANSIT

Some of your unhappiest customers work for the Commerce Department.

And that makes the Commerce people very unhappy. Can you help them? Or will they all have to ask for transfers to Agriculture?

ADD NAMES

Mrs. B. M. Varner of Sperryville, Va., reminds us of an obvious addition to our collection of strange place-names.

It's Uno, Va.—which would have been an appropriate site for the United Nations.

The name is Doodle Town, N. Y., and the explanation is that the British marched through the area en route to the battle of Stony Point—and on their way they played "Yankee Doodle."

Malora Christman observes that it's a good thing that several Maryland plantations didn't grow into incorporated towns, or we'd have these names to add:

Gittings Ha Ha; Milly's Dislike; Brother's Industry, and Run All, Luck All, Fry All.

Mrs. Elmira Parker of 6717 Poplar ave., Takoma Park, Md., asks a very pertinent question:

"I've often heard mention of Chittling Switch, Va., but I can't find it in the Postal Guide or on any map. Is it a real town, or just one of those comic names that people make up?"

Our librarians assure me that they can't find it listed any place, either, Mrs. Parker. So we'll have to assume it's an invention —unless somebody can prove otherwise.

CLEW

"In regard to the Fred E. Buck you're trying to locate," writes Mrs. B. M. Varner of Sperryville, Va., "could it possibly be Fred E. Buck of Abington, Va?

"I used to live in Abington at one time, and lots of my mail went to Arlington first."

Mrs. Varner's clew is hereby passed along to our local Fred E. Buck—and let's have no wheezy puns about passing the buck.

AGE VS. STYLE

Dell Floyd of the Shakespeare Society of Washington says:

"Every gal I've seen modeling the New Look has added from two to five years to her apparent age. Which raises the question: Which do the ladies hate more—being out of style or looking older?

"Please discuss fully, giving reasons for your conclusions."

What an assignment!

Dell, I'd say that it depends on the woman. If she's more concerned about being stylish, she wears the New Look. If she's concentrating on hiding a few years, she chooses the Old Look.

And if she has pretty legs, she prefers the Long Look.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—After he participated in the New York decision of the film executives to oust Communists from jobs in Hollywood, Jack Warner returned to his studio and assembled his writers and producers. He delivered a speech, warning them all to be on guard against the infiltration of subversive propaganda into their pictures. "I'll fire anybody who let's that happen," he said, then pointed to each—including his relatives—and added: "Because I could get along without you, without you, without you, etc." When he reached Jerry Wald, the top Warner producer, Warner said: "And I could—well, almost—get along without you."

Because of the report that Ambassador Lew Douglas might be named by the President to administer the European Recovery Plan, Ambassador Stanton Griffis is exploring the possibilities of moving from his Warsaw post to London . . . Otto Preminger, who took over the production of the new Betty Grable picture in place of the late Ernst Lubitsch, hopes to finish it in two weeks.

When the war ended, GI's in Europe were given an opportunity for additional schooling at the Biarritz-American University. Brigadier General McCoskey was assigned to head the school. He immediately won the friendship of the local citizens . . . When McCoskey, who held only the temporary rank of brigadier, was notified that the temporary status was over and that he was being returned to his permanent rank of colonel, the citizens of Biarritz refused to recognize his reduction in rank. And now, to assure him that to them he'd always be a general, a Biarritz street is named "Rue General McCoskey."

Mike Romanoff had a close-up scene with Louis Calhern, who is 6 feet 4, in "Arch of Triumph." Romanoff, who is 5 feet 6, was asked whether he wanted to stand on a box for this close-up. "No," he insisted. "Calhern's monstrosity points up my normalcy."

Reynal & Hitchcock will publish the new book by Malcolm Ross, former head of the FEPC, on Lincoln's Birthday.

Ernest Kehr, the author of "Romance of Stamp Collecting," conceived a way of sending letters to friends in New York, by way of Tibet. He addressed the letters to himself at Lhasa, Tibet, and puts the friends' return addresses on the envelope. But because Tibet is not a member of the Postal Union, United States postage is not sufficient. Tibetan stamps are also required. In a few weeks, therefore, Tibet sends the letters to the return addresses.

Bill Hardy, proprietor of Bill's Gay 90's, was one of Mark Hellinger's oldest and best friends. When Hellinger went to Hollywood he made a picture in which Hardy was one of the characters. He asked Hardy to sign a document granting permission to be portrayed. The script was submitted to him. "Mark, I'll sign it without looking at the script," said Hardy . . . "Aren't you even curious?" Hellinger suggested. Hardy glanced at the first page: There was a scene in which he was shown hitting a woman and murdering a man. "For you, I would, Mark," said Hardy, and signed.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Slow Train Through France

By Drew Pearson

Marseilles (By Wireless).—It takes about 10 hours for a fast train to travel from Paris across France to Marseilles. The French Friendship Train, however, took three days.

Leon Pearson

This was not an accident. The schedule was deliberately planned that way, in order to duplicate in reverse the American Friendship Train which required 11 days to travel from Los Angeles to New York.

Not only was the schedule purposely slow, but the French train even carried the same type of flat-car equipped with a loudspeaker as the American train from which we made speeches at railroad stations across the United States.

Because the Friendship Train came from the American people, not the Government, Geoffrey Parsons, editor of the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune was asked to accompany the train as chairman and master of ceremonies.

At each station, the local French with the Americans accompanying the train, climbed on the flatcar and Parsons led off with a brief speech telling how the train was organized in the United States, how it had collected contributions from all walks of American life and was truly a spontaneous gesture from the American people.

Following this, Robert Blake of American Aid to France explained briefly that the food was going chiefly to French children and told how it was being distributed through French schools, orphanages and hospitals. He also introduced representatives of the three American church groups—Protestant, Catholic and Jewish—which are supervising the distribution together with representatives of two French groups, the French Red Cross and Entre'aide.

I spoke next and, after a few words in very poor French, turned the microphone over to my brother, Leon, as spokesman for me.

My mother used to tell the story of how my brother and I, at the ages of 8 and 10, kept chickens and sold eggs. Acording to her, I would ring the doorbell, then push my small brother forward to greet the housewife and do the talking. Some Senators say that of recent years I have got over this reticence. In France, however, my brother,—who has spent some years here for the International News Service and the National Broadcasting Service—did a beautiful job of explaining the Friendship Train to the French people.

He told various stories about the school children; the labor unions, the businessmen, the churches, the farmers and the different towns which contributed to the train and he did it so graphically that it brought cheers from the crowds at the railroad stations.

The local mayor then responded, followed by the prefect. The former is elected by the people of the city; the latter is the representative of the French government, appointed from Paris.

The station at Valence, just two weeks before our arrival, had been the scene of a bitter railroad strike. Four men had been killed. Bullet holes still marked the walls. The strike, Communist-inspired, was partly against receiving American aid under the Marshall Plan. But on the walls alongside the bullet marks, when the Friendship Train arrived, was a huge banner reading: "Welcome et merci!"

Incidentally, one thing which has made a great impression in France is the fact that many American railroad workers contributed their salaries for one day to help haul the Friendship Train across the U. S. A. The fact that the CIO Steel Workers Union in Pittsburgh gave a carload of milk and the steelworkers and coal miners in Windber, Pa., gave a car has greatly impressed the left-wing French labor leaders. To some extent, it has taken the wind out of their argument that it's only capitalists who want to help the French and for purely imperialistic reasons.

At Valence, scene of the recent bitter railroad strike, several Communist members of the City Council came to the Friendship Train reception in the City Hall. They seemed more curious than hospitable. But other Frenchmen remarked that public opinion was so strong for the Friendship Train, the Communists obviously thought it was smart politics to be present.

At American railroad stations, the Friendship Train remained only 45 minutes. But because nothing like this had ever come through France before, the French insisted that the train stay longer. Our minimum stop, therefore, was two hours and in some cases we spent the entire afternoon and evening being feted by these hospitable people.

I wish that I could do . . . Some noble deed to prove how much . . . I am in love with you . . . Because I want your heart to know . . . My life is bound to be . . . As fruitful or as barren as . . . The branch you offer me . . . My every thought depends upon . . . The sentences you say . . . And only you can calm my fears . . . And take my tears away . . . And if you understand my heart . . .
